Feed Everybody? Big Job. Steel Coffin for Wong. $170,000,000 for Railroads. Concerning Richelieu.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

IT IS ANNOUNCED that the government will feed, at public expense, men that go on strike while the strike lasts. The American Federation of Labor representative in the South says the five hundred thousand textile workers about to go on strike will look to the government to take care of them while the strike lasts. Mr. Hodson, New York City's Commissioner of Public Welfare, says proceeds of the "city relief tax" on gross receipts of all businessmen in New York City may be used to support men on strike.

ACCORDING TO the Associated Press, Harry L. Hopkins, government relief administrator, says:

"It is a surprising thing to me we haven't had a damned sight more strikes than we have."

We shall probably have strikes in sufficient number if the government supports all strikers and, if it should decide to pay them out of public monies the wages they are asking while the strike lasts, there might be a great many strikes.

IF GOVERNMENT puts board and lodging for 500,000 textile workers that plan to strike Saturday, that will be quite an undertaking, and if a few hundred thousand woolen and rayon workers decide also to go out, it will be a really big undertaking. Perhaps, however, government agents will settle the threatened strike, as it recently settled a strike of 5,000 painters, decorators and paper hangers of New York. The employers agreed to pay $9 a day for seven hours' work which is what the painters wanted.

EDMUND WONG ON WAH, Chinese air pilot, dreamed that he crashed after a collision and told his American wife that when he did die he wanted an iron coffin.

Wong On Wah was selected with another Chinese flier, Fong Shek, to manoeuvre above the steamship Bremen, bringing in General Chang Fah-Way. The planes collided, Wong was killed, and his desire to fly and fight for the Chinese army thwarted. He will be buried here in a $750 steel coffin. General Chang, whom Wong never saw, gave the order.

Why do you suppose Wong wanted an iron coffin? It could not keep the soul in, or keep the worms out, presumably. Many prosperous Americans are buried in coffins of bronze.

RAILROADS ASK for an increase of $170,000,000 in freight rates to offset increased expenses which "reflect economic policies of the government." Railroads must run, and if the people are not paying enough, they must pay more. It is to be hoped that increased payment will provide good pay for railroad workers, conductors, engineers, trainmen, trackwalkers, all others.

There is nowhere in the world a better body of men, more reliable, dignified, obliging, safe, sober and useful than the American railroad workers.

INTERESTING AND important is the meeting of the eleventh annual convention of the Jesuit Philosophical Association on Manresa Island, Conn. Students of history will be interested in a statement made by the Rev. Lawrence K. Patterson, professor of history at Fordham University.

Father Patterson, tracing modern "nationalism" to the reformation, described Richelieu as "a cardinal of the Roman church who was the chief agent in frustrating a final and decisive triumph of the Catholic cause in the Thirty Years' War."

RICHELIEU, according to Father Patterson, "put the interests of France above those of Catholic Christendom."

When receiving the last sacrament, on the day of his death, December 4, 1642, Richelieu said:

"I pray God to condemn me if ever I meant aught save the welfare of religion and the state."

Asked at the last moment if he forgave his enemies, he replied:

"I have never had any, but those of the state."

There is no doubt that working with all the powers of his master, Louis the Thirteenth, who trusted him absolutely, Richelieu built up the great force of French "nationalism" and energy, of which Louis the Fourteenth was the proud figurehead.

Batteries — Betts and Hogan; French, Lucas and Grace.

FORBES FIELD, Aug. 29.—The Pittsburgh Pirates were trailing the Boston Braves in the first game of their doubleheader here this afternoon.

Huck Betts started on the mound for Boston, and Larry French for the Buccos.

Not more than 3,000 fans were out to see the first clash of the afternoon. The only excitement in the practice period occurred when four sandlotters went out to take a workout and Honus Wagner batted the ball to the kids.

Manager Traynor has looked over something like 30 sandlotters during the long home stay, but, aside from two or three youngsters, the lads did not make much of a hit.

Pitcher Joe Yenosky, the 200-pound boy of Belgian extraction who came in from Clarion, may be signed to a Pirate contract. The Pirate wiseacres think he will make a fine pitcher.

Pilot Traynor made a couple of changes in his batting order, largely to break up the succession of lefthand batters. P. Waner was placed below Lindstrom, who bats right-handed between Jensen and Paul. Gus Suhr, a lefthand batter,

By AL GOUGH
Staff Correspondent.

CLARION, Pa., Aug. 29.—John B. Kelly, 61-year-old "Mail Order Romeo," was pictured as an ogre who lured young girls to his farm at Fisher, near here, on the promise of marriage, by Attorney J. M. Myers, counsel for Leona Menser, 16, of Coshocton, O., on trial for the slaying of the aged farmer.

Attorney Myers, in his opening address to the jury today, announced Leona would take the stand and relate in detail her two weeks' experience on the farm—"a period of probation," as the lawyer described it.

MARRIAGE AD

Myers said:

"She will tell you how she was attracted to Kelly by an advertisement in a matrimonial agency paper. The advertisement, as near as Miss Menser can recall, read as follows:

"'A handsome bachelor, aged 40, light hair, blue eyes, weight 150 pounds; wealthy, wishes to correspond with girls and young women from 16 to 30 years of age with marriage in view.'

"Miss Menser will tell you she corresponded with Kelly, receiv-

STRIKE END DUE IN ALUMINUM

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Possibility of an agreement that would end the aluminum strike within a few hours was seen by representatives of the Aluminum Company of America during a recess in their conference today with Aluminum Workers' Council executives.

The company spokesman said:

"There's a chance, of course, that something will happen to upset the apple cart. We feel, though, that there is a distinct possibility we'll be able to get together within a few hours."

The strike, affecting about 10,000 workers in four of the company's largest plants, was called several weeks ago by the union with demands for a written contract, collection of union dues by the company and a universal wage scale.

Clear Path For Work Program

Granting of the $24,500,000 federal public works program for Allegheny County was virtually assured today apparently despite the squabble over the Liberty tubes toll plaza.

At a conference of the Allegheny County Authority, members of Council and the County Commissioners this afternoon, County Solicitor J. P. Fife read a telegram received today from the Federal Public Works Administration, stating that the contract for the big improvement plans, would be sent by airmail from Washington tonight.

Councilmen indicated to the Commissioners they were willing to consider an alternative plan for a toll ramp at the south end of the tubes as prepared by the City Planning Commission. It would entail an additional cost of about $800,000.

RUCKER QUITS IN MYSTERY

County Commissioners C. C. McGovern and C. M. Barr accepted the resignation of County Police Chief William E. Rucker at a secret meeting last Friday, Commissioner W. D. Mansfield disclosed today.

Informed by reporters that Rucker's resignation had been accepted, Mansfield said that was the first he knew of it, and telephoned Murray Snyder, chief clerk to the Commissioners, to learn of Friday's meeting. He then stated:

"I was here all day and knew nothing of the meeting. I should have been notified."

Although opposed to Rucker's appointment two years ago, Mansfield said he believed Rucker had done a good job since his appointment.

Rucker has not been seen around the Courthouse since he went on his vacation August 1. It was reported that the resignation was not voluntary on Rucker's part and that he had been dropped from the service by Commissioner McGovern.

McGovern last night hinted that Rucker had not been attending to business.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—A three-cornered race for the governorship of California was assured today as a result of yesterday's record-breaking primary election.

Sinclair, famous for his "muckraking" novels, swept to victory on the Democratic ticket with a tremendous total that almost doubled the vote tally of his nearest opponent, George Creel, wartime propagandist in the Wilson administration and California NRA administrator in the present Roosevelt regime.

ONE CONVICT SHOT BY POLICE

Two Fall Exhausted Into Police Net Near Bedford

Near exhaustion from their all-night tramp through the woods, the last pair of the four escaped Beckview farm convicts slumped into the arms of the law this afternoon.

They made no attempt to escape when they walked into a searching party nine miles from Bedford, Pa., according to an Associated Press dispatch.

They were Ralph Manning, 28, of Allegheny County, and William Buck, 31, from Cambria County.

Early this morning a third member of the escape gang was captured. He was reported as David Primer, 26, of Mercer County.

Charles B. Litzinger, 27, of Johnstown, was the first to lose in his dash for freedom. He was shot in the left leg as an officer stopped the fugitives' automobile last night in the Lincoln highway between Bedford and Everett.

Later she sued for divorce, but the case has not been brought to trial.

"I hope it is true. I can't discuss it now. I have never discussed the matter. Why should I begin now?"

City Shivers as 'Winter' Arrives; Colder Tonight

Br-r-r-r-r-r-r!

The coldest August 29 in 43 years greeted this district today. The mecury fell to 49 at the Weather Bureau, the lowest since 1891, when the official mark on this date was 48. Light frost was noted in the South Hills, residents reported.

A few topcoats appeared and many men donned vests for the first time this summer.

Fog overspread most lowlying districts, setting in last night after another of this month's frequent rains. The rainfall for the first 28 days totals 7.46 inches, an all-time record.

Observer W. S. Brotzman predicted the temperature tonight would be even lower, as an extensive high pressure area overlies the upper Great Lakes and is slowly moving into this district.

Prompted by the snappy weather, the Pittsburgh Goodwill Industries sent out an appeal for overcoats for destitute men.

CANVAS HUNG NEAR HOME OF ROOSEVELT

Work Anonymous; Call It Cartoon In Oils

International News Service.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 29.—Here in the midst of the romantic and glamorous country made famous by Washington Irving and but a short distance away from the home of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, at Hyde Park, a controversy was brewing that threatened to cause a mild sensation both here and in Washington.

Another Public Works Administration artist, it appears, has courted the displeasure of the administration at Washington this time deliberately.

Several months ago in New York, Paul Cadmus, young PWA artist, showed a canvas depicting drunken sailors ashore with women and Secretary Swanson barred it from the Navy Building.

IDENTITY CONCEALED

The present storm center is anonymous, but his canvas is hung at The Castle, headquarters of the Westchester Institute of Art, and is entitled "The Nightmare of 1934."

The painting described as a cartoon in oils, depicts Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau juggling rubber money with handfuls of it falling through to silk-hatted pigs in a trough; President Roosevelt fishing with one hand and exploring a radio mechanism with the other; Uncle Sam crucified on a cross; Ceres, goddess of the crops, being garrotted by Secretary Wallace; Postmaster General Farley stamping the life out of a postman and losing all the mail through his own fingers; a tax collector stripping the clothes from citizens; a reformer chasing nudes from the movies.

Referring to the last characterization the artist explains in a satirical note:

Embellishing the canvas are vultures in place of blue eagles and the "brainstormers" are represented as gargoyles ready to bind citizens with chains.

Secretary of Labor Perkins is shown being supported by William F. Green, of the A. F. of L., and President Roosevelt himself is made the subject of editorial comment.

INSTITUTE DENIES SUPPORT

The painting created a furore when it was revealed yesterday and the institute was prompt to announce that it in no way subscribed to the political doctrine set forth by the artist.

Charles A. Birchfield, president of the organization, described the artist as about 45 years of age. He said he desired to remain anonymous since he is employed by PWA, which was created by the administration his work takes to task.

The work is signed Jeremiah II.

FEDERAL LOAN BRANCH HERE

Pittsburgh's newest New Deal financial institutions opened today in the Vandergrift Building as the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Pittsburgh.

Resembling a building and loan association, it differs principally in that it is sponsored and supervised by the United States government, according to Robert Jones, association head. It is required to join the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, by which its depositors are insured up to $5,000.

In addition to President Jones, the association's officers are Joseph J. Vigneau, vice president, and Edward M. Seibert, secretary-treasurer.

Capital for loans is obtained through subscriptions to shares of the association and from government subscription. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to subscribe in each association up to 75 per cent of the paid-in capital.

Loans will be made to persons to buy homes or build new homes within 50 miles of Pittsburgh.

Ellenbogen Fights Home Loan Delays

John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in Washington, today was studying a letter from Congressman Henry Ellenbogen, asking immediate earmarking of Pennsylvania's share of HOLC funds.

INFLATION TALK LAUGHED OFF BY ROOSEVELT

President Terms Gold Profit Nation's 'Nest Egg'

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt emphasized today at his regular conference here that it is only the ultimate intention of the government to use the gold profit from devaluation of the dollar and he brushed away inquiries of inflation by immediate use of this fund.

The President spoke in response to questions about the speech last night by Secretary Morgenthau stating the purpose to employ the $2,800,000,000 gold profit eventually for retirement of the public debt.

JUST A 'NEST EGG'

He called attention to the word ultimately and said that meant a time pretty far in the f...ure. The gold profit fund, he added, is a nest egg and would be so regarded.

Chatting with the newspapermen, he said he was enjoying his visit at home and he hadn't started to work yet.

Talks with Norman H. Davis, ambassador at large to Europe, and Felix Frankfurter, of Harvard University, were on the day's program.

SILENT ON PRIMARIES

Keeping a strictly tentative schedule, the President said he was most hopeful of going to Newport in the middle of September to attend the international yacht race in which he has always had a keen interest. It also is his intention to return to the Summer White House from that event.

As for the threatened textile strike and the refusal of garment manufacturers to abide by his order for shorter hours and higher wages, the President smiled and said there was no comment just now.

Likewise, inquiries about yesterday's primary results failed to draw response other than a reiteration of the statement that he was taking no part in the primaries.

New Deal Cost Revealed In Morgenthau Speech

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has revealed that the government's 2,800-million-dollar gold "profit" from dollar devaluation will be used "ultimately" to reduce the nation's 27-billion-dollar public debt.

This disclosure, taken to foreshadow an assured but probably distant expansion of currency or credit, was made as Morgenthau in a radio speech portrayed government finances more fully and optimistically than ever before.

He assessed the real cost of the New Deal to date at only $505,000,000. He pointed to a 1,600-million-dollar Treasury cash balance, to 1,095 million dollars of loans and investments upon which the government expects to get its money back, and to public works projects increasing the country's "real wealth."

The government can spend up to five billions of dollars this year for emergency relief and recovery, Morgenthau declared, without substantially exceeding President Roosevelt's January estimate of recovery cost. Whether it spends this much "will depend upon developments which cannot be foreseen at this time."

SINCLAIR BEATS NRA CHIEF IN CALIFORNIA

Haight goes into the November finals by virtue of the fact that he also ran on the Progressive and Commonwealth tickets and automatically becomes their candidate.

At the same time another smashing victory stood out in the primary—the virtual election of the veteran United States Senator Hiram Johnson. He overwhelmed opponents on four tickets—Democratic, Republican, Progressive and Commonwealth—and will face only the nominal opposition of George R. Kirkpatrick, a Socialist, in November.

Sinclair blew across the Los Angeles political stage like a blizzard, rolling up such a margin in the big southern county with its preponderance of the state's population that he was "in" before he crossed the Tehachapi Mountains into Northern California.

He snowed under, besides Creel, Justus Wardell, an old-time Democrat and an original Roosevelt man; Milton K. Young, Los Angeles attorney and loyal Democrat, and a couple of lesser lights.

SINCLAIR'S PLATFORM

Sinclair pulled his candidate for Lieutenant Governor Sheridan Downey to victory with him on the Democratic ticket, and caused a terrific stir in legislative ranks with speculation of how his complete slate of State Senators and Assemblymen would fare.

Sinclair's campaign was unique in the history of this country in that he charged admission to his meetings and sold booklets explaining his epic plan, "End Poverty in California." He paid expenses, he said, with his booklets. Everywhere he attracted tremendous crowds.

They early recognized him as the "man to beat" and leveled on him with cries of "radical" and "impossible visionary." But the author was serenely on his way to a smashing victory.

Briefly, his plan proposes to put all unemployed to work in state colonies and factories; issue state script for these groups; repeal the sales tax; slap an income tax "on the rich;" increase inheritance taxes in the higher brackets; exempt small farms and homes from taxation; pension old persons and dependent widows and children.

Vote for Bilbo Forces Runoff in Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—The bid of former Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo for a seat in the United States Senate in place of Senator Hubert D. Stephens was set today for final settlement on September 18, when the two meet in a runoff primary.

Although Stephens had a slight lead over Bilbo as yesterday's primary balloting was tabulated, a run-off primary was necessary as no candidate had a majority.

With only about 300 precincts missing out of 1,611, Stephens polled 58,054 votes to 54,804 for Bilbo. Former Representative Ross A. Collins was third with 37,447 and State Senator Frank H. Harper last with 1,319.

In the Congressional contests, Representatives Whittington, Rankin and Doxey were renominated, while runoffs will be necessary in the other four districts.

Wets Swept Into Lead In South Carolina

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—With 1,007 of 1,474 precincts reported from yesterday's advisory referendum on prohibition, the wets held a lead of over 10,000 votes. The count was, for retention of state prohibition, 79,230, against 89,681. A wet majority of 14,000 in Charleston County shot the anti-prohibition total far ahead.

A runoff primary between Cole L. Blease, former Governor and Senator, and Olin D. Johnston, young Spartanburg attorney, for the Democratic nomination for Governor, also was indicated by incomplete returns. The second primary date is September 11. The vote from 1,163 precincts was: Blease, 58,867; Johnston, 73,640.

HeatherAngel, Ralph Forbes Wed Today

HEATHER ANGEL

Ruth Chatterton's Ex In Romance With English Actress

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Ralph Forbes and Heather Angel, film players, today were on their way to Yuma, Ariz., by automobile to be married.

Mr. Forbes

Forbes, former husband of Ruth Chatterton, met Miss Angel about a year ago at a dinner party. They did not see much of each other for several months. Then six weeks ago they met again on a tennis court at the home of Charles Boyer and his wife, Pat Patterson, screen players. Then the romance began in earnest. Forbes said last night:

"We talked it over and thought we ought to make our romance a permanent institution."

Miss Angel said:

"I am sure we will be very happy."

She was brought to Hollywood from England by the Fox studio and has just completed a picture, "Romance in the Rain."

Sinclair's Victory Finds Farley Mum

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Postmaster General James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, today declined to comment on the nomination of Upton Sinclair, as Democratic nominee for Governor of California.

At his press conference yesterday, however, Mr. Farley said in comment on several primaries that he had never "run out on any candidate of the party."

SIGHT REGAINED IN UNUSUAL OPERATION

20 Platinum Needles, Electrically Heated, Sew Tiny Muscle

Platinum needles electrically heated punctured the eye 20 times in the course of the skilful surgery which regained for Mrs. Westwood Sayre 75 per cent normal vision.

She lost the sight of one eye in June as she returned to her house from her flower garden. The other eye was not affected. She said:

"A black cloud crossed over my eye. I thought perhaps it was caused by the glare. An hour in the darkness confirmed my fear. My eye was blind."

A noted Memphis eye specialist said it was retinal detachment, and promised nothing—except immediate action.

EYE MUSCLE CUT

Severing a muscle he turned the eyeball inward. Foreign fluid had accumulated behind the retina, causing it to bulge toward the center of the eye. The retina is the curtain on the back of the inside of the eye on which images are focused and nerve sensations are transmitted to the brain. Blindness results if the retina be disturbed.

On the outside and back of the eyeball is a fibro-muscular covering which controls the movements of the eye and keeps the eyeball in shape.

From the outer edge of the fibro-muscular coating to the area under the bulging retina was a distance of one-eighth inch.

A tiny fraction of an inch farther and the retina would be pierced, endangering both sight and loss of vitreous, the jelly-like substance that keeps the eye round.

Twenty platinum needles, each one-eighth of an inch long each with a silk thread in one end, were placed nearby.

NEEDLE INSERTED

Clamping the first with an instrument which brought electricity to the needle until it was hot, the surgeon inserted the fiery point into the small area.

Twenty times the eyeball was pierced. Then slowly he grasped the thread and pulled out each needle. The severed eye muscle was sewed.

For two weeks the patient lived in total darkness, her head braced to prevent movement which might break tiny connections where the needles had seared through the eyeball, allowing one-half teaspoon of fluid to drain off and causing the retina to be gripped when it resumed its normal position.

The retina slowly dropped back into position. The eye healed. Bandages were removed. Light filtered into the retina. Objects became distinct.

NEW WORK HOUR SLASH LOOMS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—The administration is ready to lower the hours of work and keep intact present wages for any industry in which that action is found advisable.

This was said today at NRA headquarters at the same time it was disclosed that two officials of the recovery organization had submitted their resignations to Hugh S. Johnson, one during a stormy session of the policy board about two weeks ago and one previously.

They were Blackwell Smith, assistant general counsel of NRA, and Leon Henderson, chief of the division of planning and research. It was said authoritatively, however, the action during the policy board meeting was due principally to nervous strain on the part of all concerned and was quickly smoothed over.

For months, the administration has desired a further cut in hours of work so as to give employment to more persons, but there have been many difficulties.

President Roosevelt, himself, has urged industry to cut hours 10 per cent without any cut in the amount of total wages received. This would be the equivalent of raising hourly wages.

SCHWAB SEES BETTER TIMES

CLEVELAND, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Charles M. Schwab, affable, optimistic and sanguine of the future, came to town today from his summer home at Loretto, Pa., on the heels of an announcement that a three-way steel combine is in the offing.

A mission of "no importance," he said, brought him to Cleveland.

As for general conditions in industry as they affect the working man, Mr. Schwab observed that the last 50 years had brought many changes for the better in the relations between capital and labor. And, he added, those changes will continue.

Questioned on socialism — the nomination of Upton Sinclair for Governor in California was not mentioned by name—Mr. Schwab commented:

"I am an old man and all my life I've had a wonderful time living in the United States. I don't think we're going to have anything like that. If I were young again—I wish I were—I'd start out just as I did and build up."

Richberg Hails Recovery, Defends NRA Program

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—An assertion that America is emerging from the depression more rapidly than any other nation was combined last night by Donald Richberg, NRA counsel, with a defense of NRA.

Simultaneously, Representative Byrns, the majority leader, asserted in a statement that Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee, had disregarded facts in attacking yesterday a report to the President by Richberg that wide gains had been made under the recovery drive.

Both Byrns' statement and copies of Richberg's radio address were distributed by the Democratic National Committee.

Richberg, acting head of the National Emergency Council and the Executive Council, summarized the conclusions of his voluminous report as follows:

The government activities all fit into a well conceived and consistent plan to relieve immediate distress and to attack underlying causes of the depression.

As the direct result of the measures adopted and their practical administration, the American people have been able to lift themselves out of this depression more rapidly and with less internal dissension, and at a lower cost in human suffering and burdens upon properly, than any other comparable nation.

This advance in economic security has been achieved in such a manner as not only to preserve, but to strengthen our democratic institutions of self-government and to insure the perpetuation of our constitutional safeguards of individual freedom.

Clothes? Anne Lindbergh Wore 'Em in Greenland

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Anne Morrow Lindbergh dips her pen in thrills and color to tell in September's National Geographic magazine how it feels to go globe-trotting with the world's foremost airman.

Making her debut as author of vivid travelogue, Mrs. Lindbergh tells about the 1933 flight around the North Atlantic, on which she handled the wireless key.

She makes her travels live again: Missionary outposts of Canada; the country dances of Greenland; Iceland, where giants conquered the land; Leningrad, "a beautiful city gone a trifle shoddy;" Moscow, "amazing combination of old and new."

Her longest dissertation on her own clothes could hardly be called a fashion note—it was over the Greenland ice cap:

"I was wearing, in addition to woolen underwear, one thin wool shirt, one thick wool shirt, one wool sweather, wool riding trousers, several pairs of wool stockings, furlined kamiks and helmet, and over everything the hooded white blanket parka designed for us by Dr. Stefansson. I was quite warm except for my feet, which I sat on, and my hands, on which I put another pair of mittens."

PRINCE GEORGE REPORTED SECRETLY WED TO PRINCESS

Princess Betrothed

PRINCESS MARINA

PRINCE GEORGE

GRECIAN BEAUTY AND BRITON SHUN POLICE

Visit Music Festival And Inspect Salt Works

SALZBURG, Austria, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Prince George, of England, and his fiancee, Princess Marina, of Greece, left today for the royal domain of King Alexander at Bled, Yugo-Slavia.

Their departure was accompanied by a rumor occasioned by the fact that they came here secretly three days ago that the prince and princess already have been secretly married. There was, however, no confirmation of such a rumor.

The bride and groom-to-be came to Salzburg with Prince Paul, of Jugo-Slavia, and not even the local police knew of their presence until their departure.

Then it became known that George and Marina attended two performances of the Salzburg festival and visited the newly opened casino as well as the famous Salzkamergut, the salt works.

Britain Glad Prince George Is 'That Way' Over Marina

LONDON, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—England welcomed the news today that her Prince George would desert in bachelorhood his elder brother, the Prince of Wales.

Announcement that George, 32-year-old fourth son of the King, would wed the beautiful Princess Marina of Greece, caught London off guard. But approval of the match, the first in the royal family in 11 years, was quickly forthcoming.

Like any other young Romeo, Prince George asked first for the hand of the princess and then telegraphed home for his royal parents' consent.

Marina, who is 27, has one qualification among others which will be welcomed by the British folk. She speaks English perfectly.

The palace announcement said:

"It is with the greatest pleasure that the King and Queen announce the betrothal of their dearly - beloved son, Prince George, to Princess Marina, daughter of Prince and Princess Nicolas, of Greece, to which union the King has gladly given his consent."

Princess Marina, renowned for her brunet beauty and a lover of outdoor sports, is a niece of the late King Constantine I. of Greece. The monarchy ended in 1924. She is known as a thoroughly modern girl.

Blushing Princess Reveals It Was Love at First Sight

By ALFRED TYRNAUER
International News Service.

SALZBURG, Austria, Aug. 29.—"I cannot tell you how happy I am!"

Thus, in the traditional time-honored words of a blushing bride-to-be, Princess Marina, of Greece, today told her friends of her joy over the announcement of her engagement to Prince George, fourth and youngest son of King George and Queen Mary, of England.

The princess, long famed as one of the most attractive of European royalties, said:

"I hope the marriage will take place soon. It is most likely to be in London."

Meanwhile, regardless of any possible political and dynastic aspects of the betrothal, International News Service learned that it was a case of love at first sight. Princess Marina and Prince George met in London last winter, and fell in love immediately.

MAN SLASHES SON IN FIGHT

OIL CITY, Pa., Aug. 29.—Father and son fought a duel on the stairs of their home that may mean death to the son.

Fred Strus, 51, and his son, Francis, 24, quarreled last night, police say, over wages the latter received as an employe of the Oil City Brewing Company.

The son struck his father, police reported. The father grabbed a saw-edged butcher knife and drove his son from the apartment.

Soon the son returned. His father met him at the top of the stairs. The father lunged with the knife, according to police, the blade entering the youth's shoulder, slashing down to the elbow, severing an artery and veins.

At the Oil City Hospital today his condition was pronounced critical from loss of blood. The father was jailed. He claimed self defense.

BOY ON STAND IN LIFE FIGHT

FRANKLIN, Pa., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Testifying in his own defense, 21-year-old Walter Witherup today told a jury trying him on a charge of murder that the fatal shooting of his father was absolutely accidental.

Clark N. Witherup, his father, had lain down on a cot and was taking off his shoes to retire, Walter said. Speaking slowly and at times in a low tone, he continued:

"I was sitting near the fireplace cleaning my shotgun. We were talking about the production of oil in the well on the Truitt lease where our cabin was located. Suddenly the gun went off.

"I can't remember clearly what happened then. I know I wrapped up dad and put him in a car near the cabin, and drove —and drove."

The youthful defendant said it was next morning, Sunday, December 10, before he could "get his senses together."

Witherup had been on the stand for two hours and completed his direct testimony as court recessed for noon.

Earlier, after the state had rested, Defense Counsel Gerald McGill lost a desperate fight for a direct verdict of acquittal.

MR. CHABOT READY TO FLY

The body of Pearl W. Chabot, 51, vice president of the John F. Casey Company, who was killed when his plane crashed within sight of the municipal airport at New Philadelphia, O., yesterday, was brought here today for funeral services.

Chabot, whose home was at 608 Delafield road, Aspinwall, was an experienced pilot and an expert on airplane motors. He was making a sharp turn to the left, with the nose of his ship tilted upward when the craft went into a stall and crashed. His neck was broken.

Chabot was on his first trip to New Philadelphia and had expected to make a daily trip to supervise rebuilding of a railroad tunnel near there. One of his associates on the project witnessed the accident.

Though he always wore a parachute, it was believed by officials at the field that he did not have time to jump from his three-seater biplane.

Youth's Body Taken From Crater Depths

GOVERNMENT CAMP, Ore., Aug. 29.—(US.)—The crumpled body of Victor F. von Normann, 22-year-old University of Washington student, who fell to his death down the precipitous side of Mt. Hood crater, was brought down the mountain slope yesterday. The youth's body was recovered from a 10,500-foot level of the crater, the use of oxygen helmets being necessary to combat the sulphur fumes that formed dense clouds.

Teacher Payoff Near End in Chicago

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—(INS.)—Additional millions in cash flowed into the channels of trade today as the task of distributing $26,300,000 in back pay to teachers and school employes went forward.

Approximately 9,900 teachers and workers have been paid $14,463,900 since Chicago's "biggest pay day" began on Monday. School board officials estimate that the payoff, made possible through a Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan, will be completed by tomorrow night.

'LITTLE EVA'S' TRIAL HALTED

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Justice Riley H. Heath, presiding at the murder trial of Mrs. Eva Coo, was stricken with a light case of influenza today and ordered to bed. Meanwhile jail physicians treated Mrs. Coo herself for a persistent cold.

The postponement gave jail physicians opportunity to fight the cold that has afflicted Mrs. Coo almost since she first went on trial 13 days ago for the murder of Harry Wright. When she testified yesterday her voice was husky and low, and she coughed. She has been eating sparingly because of the cold, and this led to reports that she was on a "hunger strike."

BARRY PROBE NEARS END

Lieut. Franklin T. McQuaide, of the homicide division, will make what he hopes to be his final report to Coroner W. J. McGregor late today on the death of former Police Inspector John W. Barry. Barry was found in the garage of his home by his wife with a gunshot wound in his head, August 15, shortly after returning from a fishing trip.

Since the death of Barry a controversy between homicide detectives and the coroner's office has prevailed. Detectives investigating Barry's death maintain that the former inspector was accidentally shot while removing a loaded gun from his automobile.

Coroner McGregor intimated that foul play might have entered into the shooting. Twice McQuaide has made verbal reports to McGregor. The Coroner requested that he make a further investigation.

McQuaide said he would make his report some time today.

ing about 20 letters from him. He wrote in glowing terms of his nice home, gas wells, and extensive farm acreage. He told her, she will tell you, he had money in the bank and always insisted he was wealthy."

Attorney Myers then related how Leona came to Clarion on seven dollars sent to her by Kelly, how she walked from Clarion to Fisher, about 10 miles away, how after spending a week at Kelly's home, he agreed to marry her; how during the second week, he made unwelcome advances and how, when she sought to repulse him, his attitude changed, culminating in an argument on June 13 which resulted in a scuffle in the Kelly home the following evening, during which he was fatally shot.

CLOTHING HIDDEN

The afternoon of the shooting, Leona's counsel told the jury, Kelly locked her clothes in the rumble seat of his coupe, and drove off to plant potatoes on an adjoining farm. Returning home, Attorney Myers said Leona would testify, Kelly, in a rage, rushed at the girl with upraised fist. The attorney said:

"She will tell she ran from him and he pursued through the living room into the front parlor. She will tell she grabbed the gun he had given her to protect herself and told him to let her alone. She will tell you he cursed her and told her he wasn't afraid of a gun.

"She will show you how she held the gun at her side. She never fired a pistol before in her life, but when he grabbed her arm and scuffled with her, the gun was discharged, the bullet striking him in the neck."

Attorney Myers, during recital of the incidents leading up to the shooting and his description of the struggle which will be the basis for a plea of self-defense, the courtroom, packed with spectators, most of them women, was intensely quiet.

STATEMENT ADMITTED

The morning session was taken up with the introduction of a statement allegedly made by Leona to District Attorney M. H. Davis in the presence of Sheriff Cliff Elder and Justice of the Peace J. H. Horner. Admission of the statement into evidence was opposed by defense counsel, but objections were overruled by Judge A. A. Geary.

The Commonwealth rested at 11 a. m., and Attorney Myers immediately began his outline to the jury. The first defense witness called was Leona's mother, Mrs. Mettie Menser, but she failed to answer and Attorney Myers asked for a recess, announcing that she and other members of her family were en route here from their home in Coshocton.

SCIENCE SAVES HOLINESS CULT BOY'S LEG

Youth Now Has 50-50 Chance, Doctor Says; Singers Banned

PORT PAYNE, Ala., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Science apparently had triumphed today in the case of Wallace Doyle Sharp, Jr., 8, after a "faith cure" prescribed for his injured leg failed.

Swelling, which had made the limb four times its normal size, was "materially reduced," Dr. W. T. Miller said, and the lad's temperature is only half a degree above normal.

Wallace Doyle's improvement followed an operation, performed under the light of an oil lamp in his parents' home yesterday, during which eight inches of bone was scraped and infected tissue drained out.

Dr. Miller said:

"The boy has at least a 50-50 chance now. He is still emaciated and is not out of danger, but his constitution seems unimpaired."

Members of the Holiness Cult here, which numbers Wallace's parents on its rolls, remained away from the Sharp home today under instructions of Dr. Miller, who told them a continuation of the praying, singing and talking in the "unknown tongue" would seriously endanger the lad's life.

DOG MOURNED BY CHILDREN

Marjorie Becker, 8, and her little brother, Albert, Jr., 6, today mourn the death of their pet, the German police dog hero, Bray. He died recently—the victim of an unknown poisoner.

In April Bray distinguished itself by darting in front of traffic to save a dog friend, Wimpy, that had been struck by an auto. The medal, awarded by the Humane Society, is still attached to Bray's empty collar, hanging on the wall of the Allegheny Garage where he was watch dog.

Children, large and small, from all parts of the neighborhood spent their play time teaching Bray to do tricks and romping with it. The dog never harmed a soul, its friends say.

Meanwhile, the neighborhood is up in arms against the poisoner. Becker says he will bet one of Bray's pups to replace it in the affection of the children.

Showers were quite general over the Atlantic Coast states and the Gulf states during yesterday and last night, due to the tropical storm near Galveston, and to another low pressure area centered off the south Atlantic Coast. There were also showers over the Rocky Mountain states due to a low pressure area centered over Saskatchewan this morning, and extending down over the eastern slope of the Dakotas. Over the interior of the country the skies are clear and the weather is cool, due to a high centered between the Great Lakes and Hudson Bay and extending down over the Ohio Valley states to near the Gulf. The weather is unseasonably cool over the Lakes Region, where frost is reported this morning at several places. Over the plains states, temperatures are rising again.

Hopkins told newsmen:

"I am convinced we can come to a complete meeting of minds as to a sharing of responsibility for meeting relief needs of the unemployed in Pennsylvania for the coming year."

Entry of the political leaders into the relief problem is "the obvious procedure," Hopkins asserted, pointing out that since either Republican Attorney General William A. Schnader or Democrat George H. Earle will be Pennsylvania's next governor, it is only fair for them to take part in discussions which may effect the next state administration.

Just what Hopkins and Pinchot at their conference yesterday agreed to discuss with the political leaders, neither would say. Informed sources, however, denied reports that the proposal had anything to do with borrowing money from municipalities in the state to meet the relief bill.

Hopkins made it clear that his willingness to confer further does not constitute indorsement of the Pinchot proposal.

There was no sign that he would retreat from his former stand on relief for Pennsylvania. With the approval of President Roosevelt, he has decreed that with the beginning of September this Saturday, the federal government will cease paying all the state's relief bill.

After this week, the state must find some means, other than the state liquor store revenues originally planned to cover relief costs, to pay a "reasonable" share.

City Asked to Shoulder Rental for Relief Base

The first effort to persuade the city to shoulder more of the relief burden has been made by the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board.

The city is being asked to pay $12,000 for the rental, up until the first of the year, of a building for a central relief headquarters.

Council has asked a delegation from the Relief Board to request the Allegheny County Board of Poor Directors to pay a portion of the rental, inasmuch as the administration building will serve relief workers outside the city.

Another hearing before Council has been arranged for Friday at 1:30 p. m.

Party Chiefs, Nominees To Attend Parley

HARRISBURG, Aug. 29.—(INS.)—Republican and Democratic gubernatorial candidates and party chairmen will meet with Gov. Gifford Pinchot and Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins at noon Friday in New York City to attempt to settle the state's relief crisis without summoning a special session of the Legislature.

Acceptances from both political party camps today assured that the meeting will have a full attendance for consideration of a plan evolved at the Pinchot-Hopkins conferences in Washington yesterday.

David L. Lawrence, Democratic state chairman, after a conference with George H. Earle, party nominee for Governor, said:

"Mr. Earle and I will be there."

Gov. Pinchot said he was certain that both M. Harvey Taylor, Republican chairman, and Attorney General William A. Schnader, Republican nominee for Governor, will be present.

JOBS PROMISED 80 PER CENT

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Earning power sufficient to buy food, heat, light, clothing and rent is the hope held out for 80 to 90 per cent of jobless Pennsylvanians by Edmund T. Anderson, State Relief Board representative, as a result of the new work relief program starting September 15.

All unemployed "who want to work" will have a chance to do so under the new program, Anderson told the County Commissioners' state convention yesterday, and the remaining 10 to 20 per cent who "don't want to work" will be continued on food orders.

He urged the commissioners to submit their projects early, and said "discrimination" and "politics" in the relief administration—attacked by Commissioners John E. Ritchey, of Venango County, and Hubert Maynard, of Wyoming County—will be precluded from the new setup.

Rain Helps City Pay for Site Of Airport

LEWISTOWN, Mont., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Lewistown, after buying 300 acres of land at $10,000 for an airport, assigned men to disk an drad the land and remove a discouraging growth of wheat. This they did but a heavy rain followed.

A few days ago the airport harvested 4,600 bushels of wheat which returned $1.01 per bushel, or a net profit after harvesting of $2,500, to be applied upon the airport purchase.

POLITICS :: Independents to Open Headquarters Soon :: By MARK SHIELDS

Headquarters of the Republican Independent Committee, headed by William B. McFall, and temporarily managed by Joseph H. Bialas, in the absence of the chairman, are to be opened before Saturday on the mezzanine floor of the William Penn Hotel.

Mr. Shields

An advantageous position from the publicity and accessibility points, the hotel lookout has served with varying success as a political headquarters in the past. It was from this staff dug-out that the successful campaign of County Commissioner William D. Mansfield was managed in 1931. He won a nomination, and then election as member of the county board.

In 1932 the regular Republican organization took over the quarters and managed to lose the county for Herbert Hoover in the regular election, by a margin of approximately 37,000. Senator James J. Davis bowing to Lawrence Rupp by a smaller margin.

This year in the gubernatorial primary Attorney Charles J. Margiotti paid rent for the mezzanine and carried Allegheny County, though he lost the state.

It is planned to have a complete staff at work before Saturday, with the chairman not directly on view but a battery of secretaries present to take care of all prospective voters. The early opening of the headquarters is unprecedented, and indicates an active currying of the field to shake loose any votes which may be lurking around.

Regular Republicans Pick Hotel Henry

As an evidence of the lack of co-operation between the independents and the regulars, despite their joint denunciation of the candidacy of Representative Joseph G. Steedle for re-election in the Twelfth Legislative District, Republican County Chairman William H. Coleman has made arrangements to open headquarters in the Hotel Henry.

This is the traditional outpost of the regulars. The walls of the rooms on the second floor echo to the voices of leaders long since passed away. It was from this point that the late Senator M. G. Leslie, the late Joseph G. Armstrong and other legendary chieftains of a day when Republican regularity was a synonym for political success, operated campaigns.

Just what staff Mr. Coleman will have to help him is a matter of conjecture, and will not be decided until after Labor Day. His assistants have in the past been accredited to the standard of Senator James J. Coyne, but the Coleman repudiation of Dr. Steedle, a Coyne stalwart, may cause some alterations.

The Democrats, it is assumed, will have headquarters in the Magee Building on Fourth avenue. They managed the Roosevelt campaign in 1932 from there, next door to the headquarters usually occupied by the forces of Gov. Gifford Pinchot, when the latter was a factor in campaigns.

It is also true that they managed the campaign of Mayor William N. McNair from the same place, but this is something which State Chairman David L. Lawrence would be well pleased to forget, so it is mentioned in the length of no more than a paragraph.

Steedle's Last Anchor Pulls Away

The last official anchor of Dr. Steedle pulled loose today when Squire A. W. McMillen, of Carnegie, Republican legislative chairman for the Twelfth District, announced that he, following the lead of Chairman Coleman and Bialas, would not support the veteran for re-election.

McMillen was appointed by Coleman to head the campaign for the four Republican legislative candidates in the district. He was for some time opposed to the candidacy of Dr. Steedle, but refrained from any public comment until Coleman had spoken.

Yesterday he said, in response to a question as to what he would do:

"I intend to follow the lead of the organization. The action of Mr. Coleman relieves me of a great deal of embarrassment—and that means that I will not ask the Republicans of the Twelfth District to vote for Mr. Steedle."

Trolley Riders Spared By Bandit

on a Philadelphia Rapid Transit street car, forced him to pour $10 in small coins from his fare changer, turned to the car's five passengers and said:

"I don't mind robbing the P. R. T., but all you people are working people, just like me. So you can keep whatever you have."

COLBY, EX-AIDE TO WILSON, DEFENDS U. S. BAN ON DEBT DEFAULTERS

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in the Wilson administration, defended the Johnson Act to prohibit sale in America of war-debt defaulters' securities and used Thomas Jefferson's name in remarking that it may be regarded as a "return to the road which alone leads to peace, liberty and safety."

The act, he said in an address yesterday before the International and Comparative Law Section of the American Bar Association, may not result in the liquidation of our foreign debts, but it will "limit existing irritations to existing causes." He said:

"As the case stands today, the total of the war debts amounts to $11,565,000,000. On June 15, 1934, the installments due from our several debtors, amounting to $174,647,439, were defaulted, bringing the amount under the funding agreements to $475,068,75.

"The later installments were defaulted with an air of finality. Our debtors seemed to wash their hands of the matter—to take leave of the subject as if it had ceased to possess interest for them.

"The Johnson Act was our retort.

"There could be hardly any question that it represented the public sentiment of the United States."

Colby continued:

"The act affects 18 nations. At the time of its discussion (in Congress) and upon its passage fears were expressed that it might be interpreted as an unfriendly and provocative action on the part of our government and lead to retaliatory measures.

"In some influential sections of the press it was criticized as presenting casus belli. So far as I am informed, no protests have been received from any of the foreign nations affected and as to its being a violation of international law and presenting a casus belli, I think the most cursory examination of the question will show this effect or result is not fairly chargeable to it."

Dillinger Case Aired Before Nation's Lawyers

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—John Dillinger was given a hearing by the American Bar Association today, and from the evidence leading lawyers were expected to evolve a plan for a concerted drive on felons.

The criminal law section of the association had the problem before it. The lawyers took up the study of the slain Indiana desperado with the expectation that public sympathy would be blamed in part for the difficulties of law enforcement agencies in coping with Dillinger and other outlaws.

Joseph B. Keenan, assistant United States attorney general, led the discussion. He was expected to refer in his address to the widely publicized photograph of District Attorney Robert Estill, of Crown Point, Ind., with his arm around Dillinger's shoulder.

Estill has been censured by the association for allowing himself to be photographed with the criminal he was supposed to prosecute.

Bar Association Opens Professional 'Purge'

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Welling sentiment for a curb on dishonest lawyers burst over the American Bar Association convention as its president demanded an immediate housecleaning.

Earle W. Evans, of Wichita, Kan., head of the association, warned that the public holds the entire legal profession in suspicion because of the activities of some of its members.

He admitted there have been acts warranting the public's distrust, then said:

"We are all suffering. Our influence is minimized, our honesty doubted, and our leadership repudiated, all because of the sins of a relatively few. Let us no longer delay the already too long deferred housecleaning. Let us begin it at once."

The president's proposal put the stamp of official approval on the cries of other bar leaders for a purge of the profession's ranks.

Dying Wife Story Puts Man in Prison

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Aug. 29—(AP.)—August Macione's plaintive stories of a wife at death's door have led him to a cell in the Allegheny County Workhouse, there to spend the next 12 months. Macione admitted before Judge James A. Chambers yesterday that he earned his living by approaching funeral directors and telling of the dying wife in a hospital, after which he would request loans which were never repaid.

COUNCIL MOVES TO FIX M'NAIR JOB TANGLE

City Council has taken steps to straighten out the legal snarl brought about by Mayor McNair's numerous appointments.

Council voted yesterday to instruct the City Solicitor to bring legal action against John Murphy and O. B. Hannon, to determine whether they are legally holding jobs as city assessors.

The Mayor has fired both of them, and appointed their successors, Oscar C. Stoehr and Charles L. Brinton, but Murphy and Hannon are still reporting for duty.

'GOOD OF SERVICE'

The Mayor in announcing their dismissal to Council, stated it was for "the good of the service."

Councilman William A. Magee remarked that the Supreme Court has ruled that is not a reason.

The bringing of a suit to clear up the matter will probably be one of the first duties of Attorney Ward Bonsall as city solicitory. Five votes in Finance Committee yesterday assured his confirmation.

Unless special arrangements are made, the Mayor will not be able to swear Bonsall in before leaving for France. The Mayor departs Friday night and Council does not reconvene in regular session before Tuesday.

If a deputy Mayor is appointed, and McNair seems to favor that idea, the deputy may swear in the new solicitor.

COUNCIL TAKES ACTION

Council has also taken steps to shut off the Mayor's output of Traction Board appointments by postponing action on the name of Harmar D. Denny, Jr., for chairman, until the courts make a decision on the injunction asked by Charles A. Finley, the present chairman, against the Mayor and his secretary, Theodore L. Moritz.

The name of the Rev. James R. Cox, submitted by the Mayor for an assessor's job, was filed away in committee, the appointment having lost its significance due to the resignation of Father Cox.

TRAFFIC GROUP RULES ON PLAZA

The Better Traffic Committee approved a report and recommendation yesterday from its street facilities sub-committee favoring the adoption of the Allegheny County Authority plan for the plaza at the South end of the Liberty Tubes in preference to the plan which has been submitted by the City Planning Commission.

In submitting the report and recommendations, John M. Rice, chairman of the street facilities sub-committee, said that the committee felt the Allegheny County Authority plan would cost less and that it would take care of the traffic movement with less hazards and greater efficiency.

The Better Traffic Committee views on the merits of the two plans will be reported to Mayor McNair and members of City Council.

QUIZ FOR CITY PAYROLLERS

Mayor McNair's Efficiency and Economy Commission wants to know how long city employes take for lunch.

This was among numerous other questions filling a page and a half questionnaire in the hands of more than 5,000 city payrollers today. They have four days in which to fill out the papers.

Other information sought includes details on qualifications, record of service, married or single, number of dependants, education, salary, description of duties, regular and occasional, and hours worked Saturday.

Each employe's superior is asked to comment on the qualifications required for the job.

The questionnaires are the outcome of several months' work by the commission headed by Maj. Ezra B. Whitman. The commission is patterned after a similar body in Baltimore which effected a marked reduction in municipal expenses.

Lily Engaged, But Says It's 'Unofficial'

LILY DAMITA

English Millionaire Latest Addition to Royal Names

International News Service.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Frustrated in attempts to keep their engagement secret because "our friends in New York indiscreetly blabbed," Lily Damita, beautiful film star, today admitted her betrothal to Hugo Brassey, English millionaire. They have been engaged for four months, she said, and probably will be married in New York in October. She added:

"Only our nearest and dearest friends knew about it. It was Mr. Brassey's wish that the engagement be kept secret pending his return from Australia, where he now is visiting his uncle and settling up many affairs connected with his family's Australian estate."

Among notables who have paid admiring court to Lily in past years are Prince George of England, in whose company she was seen several times at Del Monte on the California coast, and Prince Louis Ferdinand, second son of the German Crown Prince.

CENTRAL POLICE FAVORED BY DRY

Centralization of all police authority in a state constabulary, replacing locally-directed law enforcement, forms one of the chief planks in the platform of Herbert T. Ames, of Williamsport, Prohibition party candidate for Governor. Ames made his announcement yesterday at a meeting of the party's state committee here.

A second plank calls for the election of a President and Congress which will re-enact national prohibition.

George D. Harger, of Pittsburgh, was re-elected state chairman of the party. Hattie E. Johnston, of Crafton, was elected treasurer, and Sara Pollard, of Pittsburgh, secretary of the state organization. Members of the executive committee include F. J. Fithian, of Grove City, nominee for United States Senate; George L. Pennock, of Lansdowne; Rev. A. F. Faust, of Pittsburgh, and T. S. Grumbine, of Lebanon.

Johnston Replies To Loafing Charge

A complaint received from a resident of Gladstone street that city workers were loafing on the job has been answered by Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston. He indentified the alleged loafers as a group of Relief Works Division employes engaged in mine sealing projects.

TRIAL BOARD SHAKEN UP BY BELL

"Unintelligent vestiges by former police trial boards," as he described it today caused Public Safety Director A. Marshall Bell to change the set-up for selecting members of the board.

The change was announced at the close of today's Trial Board hearings by Bell, who announced that the present panel of 25 policemen would be the permanent panel for drawing members for the board.

Bell told the men:

"It will save time and confusion resulting from selecting a new list of 25 men each week."

Following the announcement, several policemen told reporters the members of a permanent board "might be influenced and prejudiced by their superiors."

In his office later, Bell said trial boards on "numerous occasions" returned unintelligent verdicts. He added:

"They did not meet with the charge and offense with which the officer was charged.

"The purpose of having permanent members is to have men capable of rendering intelligent verdicts, who understand the charges.

"There is no funny work connected with the change. It was for the good of the service."

MART TENANTS PONDER RENTS

Tenants of the North Side Market House have been asked to attend a hearing tomorrow at 3 p. m. to consider rental rates for the remodeled building.

In order to pay interest on an investment of $260,000 to be made in the market house, large increases in rentals are contemplated, according to Carroll B. Collins, chief clerk of the Bureau of City Property.

At present the top rental for a stand in the market is $300 a year, Collins stated. This might have to be raised to around $720 a year, he said.

A government grant of as much as $71,000 depends on the city spending a little more than twice that amount on labor and materials.

The plan is to install complete new equipment in the market house, reduce the number of entrances and set aside space for a farmers' market and restaurant.

Magistrate Fines Man as Gambler

Charged with being a gambler, John Simons, 44, of 16 Soffel street, was fined $25 or 30 days to jail today by Magistrate Anthony Lucas in Central Police Station. Simons was arrested with Boris Chenko, 44, of the Helping Hand, last night in a Smithfield street confectionery store. Police say they were writing numbers. Chenko was discharged.

FILM RED SCARE SUSPECT FREE

They were among 24 arrested in raids here more than a month ago. The other 13 were acquitted, including Caroline Decker, whose arrest involved the names of four film stars in radical investigations.

In raids on the apartment of Miss Decker, secretary of the Agricultural and Cannery Workers' Union, a Communist organization, police said they found correspondence indicating James Cagney had contributed money to aid Communistic activities. The screen actor vigorously denied any connection. Lupe Velez, Dolores Del Rio and Ramon Novarro, whose names were found on a sheet of paper in Miss Decker's apartment, also denied radical leanings or connections.

The jury returned the last of its verdicts late yesterday after 28 hours' deliberation. The trial lasted four weeks.

Council to Hear Tuberculosis Report

A hearing on conditions at Tuberculosis Hospital at Leech Farm, requested by Mrs. Helen Ehrenfeld, has been set before City Council for September 6. Mrs. Ehrenfeld, a member of the committee which investigated the administration at Leech Farm, refused to approve a report which minimized charges of drinking and thievery among employes.

ral Association that he looked upon the collapse of the League of Nations with apprehension "almost with panic." He referred to existing conditions in the world as "a state of international anarchy."

AT HILSEN, GERMANY, a big gathering of scientists hears from Prof. Max Gering, of the Berlin University, that our American agricultural relief program means an end of our capitalistic system and the coming of socialism in America. Socialism, says he, has made great strides in American public opinion, a "drastic breach in the old order." If that be so, Americans don't know it, for at least ninety-nine out of a hundred of them might exclaim with the distinguished moving picture lady, Lupe Velez:

"My gosh, I don't even know what a Communist or a Socialist is."

LORD EDWARD MONTAGU, second son of the Duke of Manchester, thought he would join the French Foreign Legion, changed his mind, started a "hot dog" stand on the edge of the Thames at Maidenhead, and is well satisfied.

He sells coffee, soft drinks and sandwiches with his hot dogs, and he made four pounds in twenty-four hours and finds hot dogs more comfortable and profitable than the Foreign Legion.

TO HAVE A descendant changed from hunting with hounds to the hot-dog business might astound and disrupt the first Duke of Manchester, who fought with King William at the battle of the Boyne, where, according to the late Timothy Healy, the Irish were beaten because they were led by an English king and the English won because they were led by a Dutchman.

GERMANY, preparing for a hard winter and with warcry, is endeavoring, through Propaganda Minister Goebbels, "to establish hunger as a virtue," and arouse the people's enthusiasm concerning the duty of "doing without."

In this country also we expect a hard winter, but instead of a glorifying of hunger, and the "noble patriotism of going without," our government says: "Nobody shall be hungry," the American plan will be the more popular.

TUBE CITY CLUB BOLTS PARTY

The McKeesport Democratic Club, headed by Dr. W. H. Chambers, has according to a statement made by him today, bolted the Democratic ticket for the November election and changed its name to the American Club of McKeesport. A meeting is to be held tomorrow night to make indorsements.

John Sweeney, president of the board of directors of the club, also is reported to have returned to the Republican party for the November election. He was a candidate for Democratic county chairman against David L. Lawrence last May, being supported by the group which backed Judge Charles D. Copeland of Westmoreland County for Governor.

The Democratic organization claimed that Sweeney was registered as a Republican when he filed his nominating papers.

HUEY LONG FOES PRACTICE WITH MACHINE GUNS

By ROBERT G. NIXON
(International News Service)

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 29.—The lethal battle of machine gun fire echoed an ominous warning over the turgid Mississippi River today as the Huey Long dictatorship prepared to launch its offensive at the politically rebellious city of New Orleans.

The guns, ultra-rapid fire weapons of the sub-machine gun type, ripped out staccato bursts as New Orleans blueshirted riot squads took hurried lessons in their use at the Sixth Precinct Station Target Range.

Fourteen pieces of the powerful ordnance have just been purchased for the police force which the special session of the Louisiana Legislature, called and dominated by United States Senator Huey P. Long, decreed must be disarmed in the crucial September 11 congressional primary.

ANY EMERGENCY

The weapons are for use, said Supt. of Police George Reyer, in defense against heavily armed bandits.

But, said Reyer, they will make it possible for the Police Department "to cope with any emergency."

No comment was forthcoming from the city's Mayor, T. Semmes Walmsley, head of the strong old regular Democratic organization which is in revolt against Long's dominance, on the coincidence of the appearance of the submachine guns and the crystallization of maneuvers of Long forces from the $5,000,000 skyscraper Capitol at Baton Rouge to stamp out its opposition.

OUT TO GET MAYOR

Meanwhile, the legislative probe of the New Orleans city administration, based on charges hurled by the "Kingfish" that gambling establishments and the red-light district yield an annual payoff of $13,300,000 to the "city ring," was expected to start at any moment.

Long himself will fill the role of chief prosecutor.

He has made no secret of the fact that he is out to "get" the Mayor. He said:

"We're coming down to New Orleans with bells on, yes, sir. And for Turkey-Head-Sulphur Walmsley, when we get through, the Philippine Islands will be too close."

WHO HIT HUEY? NEW VERSION

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Zit's, a theatrical newspaper, said today that Senator Huey Long was not "socked" at the Sands Point Bath and Country Club on Long Island, as reported on August 26 last year.

The newspaper attributes the incident to a "villification campaign, an attempt to destroy a man through ridicule," and quotes Gene Buck, the composer and producer, as giving "the real data on 'who socked Huey.'"

The newspaper quotes Buck as saying—

That Senator Long was his guest at the club on the night of the purported "socking;"

That Senator Long didn't get a black eye, but suffered "a slight cut above one of his eyes which could have been caused by striking his head against the door;"

That Huey had left the dinner table to go to a washroom, and explained when he returned that "two or three strangers had jumped on him..but that he had wrestled out of the place."

MUSIC'S PLACE IN NEGRO ARTS STRESSED

By ZELDA J. ORMES

The hundreds of visitors who are in the city this week for the fifteenth annual convention of the National Association of Negro Musicians are fast making the organization a significant unit in the world of Negro arts. The association originated as a small group, headed by Henry L. Grant, of Washington, D. C., in 1909.

Twenty states were represented at the first convention. Today the organization has branches all over the country. The association was formulated to make more people aware of the esthetic value of music, to achieve recognition for all phases of Negro musical talent and to stimulate interest in local talent by opening avenues of opportunity through sponsored scholarship awards.

The organization numbers among its staunch supporters such nationally-known musicians as Nell Hunter, W. C. Handy, Marion Anderson, Clarence Cameron White, Mme. Lillian Evanti and Anita Patti Brown.

MANY SPEAKERS

The convention opened with a mass meeting at 3 p. m. Sunday in the Schenley High School auditorium. Visitors were welcomed by Mary Cardwell Dawson, local president. Choir and audience joined in singing the Negro National Anthem and other songs and speeches followed.

Mayor McNair welcomed out-of-town visitors. Mrs. Daisy E. Lampkin, vice president of federated clubs; Herbert T. Miller, of the Y. M. C. A., and the Rev. J. S. Hatcher spoke. Harvey Gaul, Pittsburgh music critic, spoke on "The Negro's Contribution to Music In This City." These officers were presented: Maude Roberts, president; Vemper Herreld, vice president; J. Wesley Jones, executive secretary; Olive Coleman Thomas, recording secretary, and George Hutchison, treasurer.

On Monday the convention went into session at Ebenezer Baptist Church. In the afternoon there was a student program at Schenley High School with Lillian Le Mon, of Indianapolis, honorary president, presiding.

Business and singing were combined Tuesday. Mrs. D. V. Murdock, president of the Tuesday Musical Club, discussed Negro music and its place in American history as true folk song and outlined the purpose and accomplishments of the National Federation of Musicians and Composers.

Talent from St. Louis, New York, Detroit, Indianapolis, Columbus, Galveston, Tex., Washington, D. C., Cleveland, Chicago and Pittsburgh was heard Tuesday night in selections by Verdi, Debussy, Gounod and Mendelssohn.

Following the concert the Pittsburgh Courier was host to officers, delegates and members at the Savoy ballroom. Wednesday morning, business was resumed briefly before a tour of Heinz factory was made with Paytora Rose.

Huge Stocks Relieve Cotton Magnates Of Strike Worry

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—The cotton textile mill owners have a very good reason for sitting around twiddling their thumbs in the face of the impending strike. They know something.

Mr. Mallon

Their figures of stocks on hand are never made public, but are circulated privately among leaders in the trade. These show that cotton textile manufacturers had on hand a few days ago enough finished grey goods to supply demand for a normal month.

In fact, their stocks are so high that they would probably have sought a continuance of the NRA order curtailing code production, had they not suspected a strike was coming.

Furthermore, the old order curtailing production expired last Saturday. So they have a week of unlimited production now at hand before the strike breaks. If they operate at capacity they can boost production 33⅓ per cent above what it has been, thus piling up additional stocks.

DANGERS

These manufacturing stocks are at least equaled by additional stocks in the hands of the garment makers, dyers, retailers, et al. (The gray goods include only those which have not yet been dyed.)

This means that, as far as the public is concerned, there is at least a two months' supply of cotton goods at hand for the strike. The price will probably go up, but not every much, unless the silk, woolen and rayon workers also walk out. In that possibility lies the main importance of the strike, both to the industry and the public.

If silk, woolen and rayon goods continue to be manufactured, the average buyer will automatically accept these substitutes. Habits thus formed sometimes remain after strikes are over. The experience in the coal industry 10 years ago is proof of that. Repeated strikes encouraged the developments of substitutes, so that the coal operators have never recovered their markets, even to this day.

HAYSEEDS

O. Henry's assumption that New York is the biggest hick town in the world was fully justified by the way Wall street bit on the Angas pamphlet.

Competent authorities contend that this little book, written by an English economist, had more to do with the recent stock market rise than anything else. The title of it is "The Coming American Boom" and its thesis is that there is so much money piled up in banks now that, at the first sign of restored confidence, speculation will run rife.

The Wall streeters read it, decided the boom was here, and shot prices up. A few days later they began to discover minor passages in the pamphlet suggesting a lack of fundamental knowledge regarding the American financial system.

But the funniest part is that the main thesis is old. It was first pointed out publicly by own our Federal Reserve Board in a monthly bulletin issued six months ago. Wall street never noticed it then.

All of which certainly shows that farmers out west are missing your opportunities, trying to make a living on the farm, when they could go to Wall street and sell gold bricks to the bulls and bears.

NOTES

The Richberg report on New Deal progress is going to be made a campaign textbook for Democratic congressional candidates . . . Commerce Secretary Roper's sobering speech on the New Deal attitude toward business took the same moderate tone as speeches by Chairman Kennedy of the Securities Commission, and Assistant Commerce Secretary Dickinson. There will be more of them . . . A number of the New York speculators have been quietly going in for cheap gold and silver stocks on the Toronto exchange. The extent of their operations is indeterminable, but each purchase represents a flight of capital . . . The maximum number of workers in all branches of the textile industry was 1,096,000 in 1929, which indicates that the current popular estimate of 800,000 is somewhat large . . . The current forgotten man appears to be Budget Director Douglas, once the best informed New Dealer, now the least noticed.

SCANTILY-CLAD JOAN MEANT NO OFFENSE

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Officials of the Ewark Atlantic Beach Club declared today they meant no disrespect to the Catholic Church in depicting Joan of Arc in a bathing suit, but one of the beneficiaries of its annual charity ball remained steadfast in an announced determination not to accept any share of the proceeds.

Club officers, expressing regret at what they termed "a very unfortunate affair," said they would send a check anyway to St. Joseph's Hospital at Far Rockaway, one of the four advertised beneficiaries.

Sister Mary Bertrand, superintendent of the hospital, said the church was opposed to beauty shows in general and declared she would not accept the money.

Sister Bertrand said she had understood the ball was to have been merely a dinner followed by dancing. She added:

"Then after it was all over I heard that there was a bathing beauty pageant which was most agreed to by the hospital. Several people were surprised at St. Joseph's allowing its name to be used in such an affair. I will most accept the money."

Joan of Arc, a saint of the church, was depicted in the pageant by Miss Mary Peck, who wore a bathing suit designed to look like armor.

Kenneth Murchison, architect and chairman of the club's governing committee, declaring "we had no intention of doing anything wrong or offensive to any one," said his recollection was that Joan of Arc "was the most dressed-up person in the entire pageant."

His statement was not disputed by those who recalled the portrayal of Eve by Miss Eve Shaw. Miss Shaw, a lissom, willowy blonde, was clothed principally in her long, flowing tresses, a garland of leaves, and a pair of sandals.

YOUNG BIRDMEN VIE IN HEARST CONTEST

Special to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

A close second for the national model plane title, in the greatest outdoor model plane contest ever held in this country, was Walter E. Getzla, of Chicago, with 175 points. Edward Guth, of Syracuse, took third with 125 points.

NEW GLIDER RECORD

Robert Meagher, the new national champion, took the show right from the start when, 10 minutes after the first event had gotten under way, he broke all previous records with his glider in a flight of 6 minutes 21 4-5 seconds. Not satisfied with this unusual feat, he continued his gallant efforts and in the single propeller event took second place, adding 75 points to the 100 attained in the glider competition. In the third and final event of the day this same lad took fourth place to bring his total points to 200.

As the models penetrated the ether and started to fly out of sight an auto containing the official timer, official Army officer and witness and the contestant pursued the craft in an effort to obtain the true duration of the model, often following it for three and four miles.

Nose dives and loops, immelmens and wing overs, zooms and spins were the order of the day as the models hit air currents that sent them into flying maneuvers.

FIELD IN GOOD SHAPE

The day was almost perfect for the events and Fort Myer Field, Virginia, when the 17 young aviation enthusiasts gathered for the most important event in their lives was in excellent condition.

The contest was under the personal supervision of Lawrence Shaw, national director of the Junior Birdmen movement, and Irwin S. Polk, assistant to Mr. Shaw, in charge of the Junior Birdmen Model Plane Institute activities. Also assisting were William Walesby, Detroit wing commander; Edward Convery, Baltimore wing commander, and Fred Chapman, wing commander of New York City.

The official timer, for which there was one for each contestant, were members of the District of Columbia Playground Association under the personal direction of Richard S. Tennyson, assistant supervisor. Members of the enlisted staff of Fort Myer field acted as witnesses to the timers.

The breaking of the world record for gliders and an unusual flight of more than nine minutes in the twin propelled event were the highlights of the day.

HEARST TROPHY AWARDED

The William Randolph Hearst trophy, donated to the Junior Birdmen of America by the noted publisher, was awarded to Robert Meagher, new national model plane champion, at a special banquet held after the contest at the Ambassador Hotel. Among those present were Lieut. Gen. (retired) James E. Fechet; Prof. Louis F. Crook, Col. J. Carroll Cone, supervisor of air commerce regulations; Maj. Charles A. Schroeder, former Schneider cup champion; Harold Gatty, famous flier; Eugene L. Vidal, director of the United States Bureau of Air Commerce; Gen. Robert Lee Bullard, and others.

In addition to the William Randolph Hearst trophy the winner will be rewarded with a choice of a trip to Europe or an aviation scholarship. Aviation scholarships will also be awarded to George Getsla, of Chicago, second place record holder, and George Guth, of Syracuse, third place record holder.

The boys, after two days of sightseeing in the national capital and a busy day at the contest at Fort Myer Field, were ready to leave for their respective homes on the next train leaving town. All were unanimous in praise of the contest which, they stated, was the finest of its kind ever conducted and looked forward with hopes of being the city champion in the forthcoming indoor contests so that they might compete in the indoor national competition to be held in Detroit this winter. Following is a complete record of the results of each event:

Public Begged To Help Him On Freaks

DARRYL ZANUCK

Zanuck Starts Odd Hunt Aiming at Barnum Film

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 29.—Just back with 75 trophies from Africa, Producer Darryl Zanuck starts on another big game hunt today.

But this time he has no experienced jungle guides, in fact he isn't even sure his quarry exists.

For the diminutive production head of the Twentieth Century Pictures is about to start a film based on the life of P. T. Barnum, and one of his first problems will be to round up a collection of freak animals, such as the great showman used to exhibit to his startled countrymen.

Barnum scoured the four corners of the earth for his freaks. Zanuck is willing to do the same, but he has to know where to start. The producer today broadcast an appeal to the public to help in the task.

So pitch in. Do you know where the movie chief can find:

A two-headed cow.
A three-headed frog.
A camel with three humps.
Siamese twin chickens.

Or any other strange freak of nature such as an elephant with 10-foot tusks, a calf with five legs, a genuine sacred cow, a rooster that talks like a parrot, a cat that barks like a dog and a talking crow.

If so, please get in touch with Mr. Zanuck, care Twentieth Century Pictures, United Artists Studio, Hollywood, and help the little man with the big job to return to his other worries.

DIVORCEE WINS NEW TRIAL

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 29.—Mrs. Grace Tetlow Sauveur, socially prominent divorcee, against whom a $25,000 heart balm verdict was returned by a jury last May, has won a new trial.

Dr. Virginia A. Hussey, 38-year-old daughter of a Venezuela public official, declared:

"I intend to go right ahead with the suit again. I still love my husband. All I want in the courts is satisfaction.

"I think if a jury sentenced Mrs. Sauveur to 25 lashes instead of to pay me $25,000, I would be satisfied. It would vindicate me."

Last May, Mrs. Hussey brought the alienation of affection suit. During a two-day trial she occupied the stand for hours, describing a love nest she said was maintained by her husband, Lindley M. Hussey, a novelist, and Mrs. Sauveur.

PROPOSE DAM REMOVAL

Removal of Herrs Island Dam and lengthening of river pools in the vicinity of Pittsburgh was being considered today following a meeting of river and industrial representatives in the Federal Building yesterday.

The proposed raising of the Emsworth Dam, in the Ohio River, would raise the water level at the Point by approximately seven feet, according to Maj. W. D. Styer, in charge of the Army Engineers here.

Raising of the dam would also permit removal of the Herrs Island Lock and Dam in the Allegheny River, and Lock and Dam No. 1, in the Monongahela River. It would create a pool on the Allegheny approximately 15 miles long, and one on the Monongahela about 19 miles long.

Officials of railroads and Chief City Engineer Charles M. Reppert asked delay to study the proposal.

SLAVS REFUTE PLAN TO WAR ON ITALY

Sun-Telegraph News Service.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—A new "war scare" story reporting Germany and Jugo-Slavia as conspiring against Italy and Austria, reached London today through the medium of the Exchange Telegraph Company. Credited to the Reichspost of Vienna, an official government publication, the story was immediately denied.

In brief, the story asserts that Germany and Jugo-Slavia intend to make war on Italy and then despoil Austria of considerable territory.

The Exchange Telegraph immediately sought out Dr. Jeftitch, Jugo-Slavian foreign minister who is visiting King Alexander at the royal palace at Bled, who had the following statement to make:

"I must deny the allegation and emphasize that we have no territorial aspirations whatever."

VIENNA, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—The threat of internal outbreaks hung once more over Austria today and this time it was in pro-government forces.

Busy for months in stamping out Nazis, the Fascist cabinet of Chancellor Schuschnigg suddenly found danger from another source—friction in the ranks of the Heimwehr, or Fascist home guard, headed by Vice Chancellor Ernst von Starhemberg.

A number of Heimwehrmen were arrested yesterday by police.

Auto Damaged By Garage Fire

An automobile was damaged $400 early today in a fire in the garage of C. H. Williams, at 618 Greenfield avenue. The auto was the property of a McKeesport dealer. The garage was damaged $25.

Vote 'Ja'! Advised These Troopers

GERMANS LINED UP AT A BAKER SHOP POLLING PLACE IN BERLIN TO VOTE FOR HITLER

Typical German scene on the day set aside for the national plebiscite: Police and uniformed Nazi troopers keeping the peace as millions (nine-tenths of them) turned out to vote just "Yes"—meaning full approbation of Reichskanzler Hitler's policies for the Nazi-dominated government. One-tenth voted "No." This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

2,000 DEATHS LAID TO NAZIS

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The New York Post, in copyright articles by Johannes Steel, declares that "2,000 men and women have been massacred in Germany since June 30, 1934."

The Post lists by name 570 persons, and says they were obtained "after thorough research by able investigators." The paper says:

Some 400 persons sentenced to prison terms by the Hitler government, now are "missing," Steel asserts. He says they disappeared from concentration camps.

A list of 230 persons the Post says, were killed was published yesterday, of which 144 were shot "while trying to escape," or were simply murdered—beaten to death or left to starve."

Two Trucks Crash, Traffic Tied Up

Traffic at Seventh street and Duquesne way was tied up 20 minutes early today by a collision of two trucks. No one was injured.

HITLER TERMED 'MALE AIMEE' BY BLOCK

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Paul Block, publisher, today described the president-chancellor of Germany, Adolf Hitler, as "a male Aimee Semple McPherson, who won't quit."

Block returned on the Conte di Savoia after a tour of Germany, Austria and France. He said he talked to the new Austrian chancellor, to Mussolini and to some German leaders. An appointment with Hitler, however, was cancelled, he said, because of the last illness of the late President Hindenburg.

He said everybody was talking about war. He added:

"I do not believe there will be war, unless Hitler starts to fall; then, to save himself, he may start a war to get his people back of him again."

The publisher said he asked several leaders this question:

"If you have the affection of the people you believe you have, why do you not trust the people with a free press?"

The German leaders, he said, had no answer. Mussolini told him the Italian press was free.

Block said that his observation abroad had convinced him the need of the United States was for a conservative party "to bring us back to prosperity." He said:

"I was happy to note this morning that the Statue of Liberty was still here. I was afraid the New Dealers might have torn it down, and when I saw it still standing, I uttered a prayer of thanks."

MANOR HOLDUP MAN HELPS BOY AIDE

GREENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—A "big brother's" effort to save his younger brother-in-law a long prison term for "running around" and admitting his part in the Manor National Bank robbery was not unavailing.

Nineteen-year-old George Klaus, of East Pittsburgh, one of the four sentenced today by Judge William T. Dean for the holdup, was sent to the Pennsylvania Industrial School at Huntingdon "until discharged by rules of that institution"—which probably means a two-year term.

Maynard Baker, or Irwin, who turned state evidence to "save" Klaus, was sent to Western Penitentiary to from 12 to 24 years.

Francis Winters, of Turtle Creek, named by Baker and Klaus in their confessions as the "brains" of the robber gang and accused by them of "holding out" $1,500 in a split-up, was sentenced to 20 to 40 years. In addition to this he must serve 16 years of a 20-year term previously imposed in Allegheny County for violation of parole.

The Judge ignored pleas of Counsel Philip K. Shamer that the 16 years be made concurrent.

Harold Dorict, of Wilkinsburg, who elected to stand trial with Winters and entered a plea of guilty before the trial had been concluded, was sentenced to from 16 to 32 years. He was on parole from Huntingdon Reformatory and will have additional time to serve because of parole violation.

SCHOOL DEPOSIT IN BANK SOUGHT

Opposition to the payment of 60 per cent dividends by the recently organized Bridgeville National Bank on balances of depositors of the closed First National Bank of Bridgeville, which it succeeded, until $3,854.28 is paid the School District of South Fayette Township, was recorded in Federal Court.

The school district, through its president, John Townsend, filed a petition seeking an injunction to restrain the newly opened bank and O. K. Bingham, conservator of the First National Bank, from making the dividend payments on balances of depositors of the closed bank, until the school district receives the amount claimed.

Subsequent to the closing of the First National Bank during the banking holiday in March, 1933, the school district received $34,954.47 it had on deposit, protected by collateral, leaving an alleged unpaid balance of $3,854.28.

Judge R. M. Gibson set September 4 for a hearing on the petition.

FIREMEN PLAN PARADE

More than 50 fire companies will join with Homestead Park firemen in a celebration and parade tonight, when they will march through Munhall, West Homestead and Whitaker.

Fire Chief John Heinz, of Pittsburgh, and M. F. McConnell, general superintendent of the Homestead Steel Works, will be among the judges.

A water battle and celebration was held by the Homestead Park firemen's drum corps in West Field, Munhall, last night, as a part of the celebration.

The water battle between Baldwin Township firemen, champions of Allegheny County, and Blaine Hill firemen, champions of Westmoreland County, ended in a draw—being halted by darkness.

HURDS 8 NEW MURALS PROVE SPRIGHTLY

Panels of Season's Festivals Feature Bright Vision

By PENELOPE REDD

Claude Hurd is the latest artist in town to turn to mural decoration. He designed eight panels for the Alvin Theater which opens Thursday night. As a theme he has taken the procession of the holidays. The figures symbolizing the year's festivities have not handicapped the sprightliness of his design. He makes us see them with the bright vision of the child.

Miss Redd

His is no solemn parade but a gala affair in which youth, maturity, and old age participate in high good humor.

Mr. Hurd's result is the more surprising in that he has not resorted to the artifice of gay colors to produce his effect, but has depended entirely upon the element of design.

As a decoration for its purpose, we have not yet seen a more appropriate one among the many that have been painted in Pittsburgh this year.

Claude Hurd's work is phenomenal in view of his short period of art study in the night school of the Carnegie Tech. He has put his hand to any and all kinds of work.

THE PAGEANT OF THE HOLIDAYS . . . ONE OF EIGHT PANELS

One of the eight panels through which Artist Claude Hurd gaily portrays the pageant of the holidays. Here go a little girl to school, the farmer with his harvest, the witch on her broom with the bat and his Jack o' Lantern, a soldier and sailor to parade.

Perhaps that is the reason that play in the panels portraying the he projects so lucidly the spirit of cycle of the holidays.

4 HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

An alleged hit-and-run driver who said he was Joseph Gonzalez, of 2611 Wightman avenue, was arrested last night accused of having injured Frank Rudski, 31, of 2341 Fleetwood street. The latter was removed to the West Penn Hospital.

Henry Schoenberger, 12, of 2321 South Eighteenth street, suffered a fractured skull and collarbone when he was struck by an automobile near his home yesterday. Blanford Woodner, 37, of 2818 Charlotte street, the driver, told police the boy jumped from behind a truck into the path of his car.

One driver was injured in a skidding accident involving four autos on Ohio River boulevard at Elizabeth street, Avalon, last night. Andrew McCleary, 1209 Second avenue, Conway, suffered a broken left leg. Leo A. Keller, 22 Sharon street, Mt. Oliver, whose car figured in the crash, was held under $1,000 bond, police said.

A. H. Mills, 49, of 156 Dellvia street, suffered a broken collarbone when struck by an auto driven, police said, by Joseph J. Angel, 35, of Rhetland avenue, at Fifth avenue and Atwood street, last night.

Sweet Singing Lures Deer To Camp

ESTES PARK, Col., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—A deer that appeared out of the darkness while a party of hikers were singing about the campfire showed himself to be something of a music critic.

Each time the music stopped the animal started away, only to return when the singing was resumed.

Events seem to tumble dizzily over one another this time of year, with so many diversified interests. There are pre-nuptial entertainments for September brides, and the school set planning last-minute parties before speeding back to books, and the ever-present—or should we say absent—travelers.

MRS. SCHILLER

Next week there will be a number of social affairs honoring Margaret Rebecca Blackburn Geddes, daughter of Mrs. Mabel R. Geddes, of Walnut street, and James R. Geddes. She's to marry John Franklin Lewis, Jr., son of the John Franklin Lewises, on Friday afternoon, September 7. Margaret Rebecca is an Ellis graduate, you'll recall.

She will be feted at a bridge luncheon Wednesday, September 5, by Mrs. Mark D. Heer and Mrs. Charles Fisher at Mrs. Fisher's home in Hazel drive, and that evening Mrs. Chester B. Hays will give the spinster dinner in the P. A. A. The bachelor dinner will be given the same evening at the home of John Slick, who is to be best man, and after the dinners Mrs. Hays' party will join the other at the Slick home.

Father Will Give Rehearsal Dinner

Miss Geddes' father will give the rehearsal dinner the eve of the wedding in the P. A. A.

The ceremony is to take place in Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church with the Rev. Ronald Garmey officiating.

To Dobbs Ferry soon will go Mary Hammond, the J. Sidney Hammonds' daughter.

Douglas Evon Nelson, son of the John Evon Nelsons, of Thomas boulevard, a graduate of the Arnold School and of Princeton, where he was graduated with honors in English in June, is to matriculate this fall at the University of Edinboro, where he will prepare for the ministry.

He was captain of the football team at Arnold in 1930 and appeared in two plays presented by the Arnold Dramatic Club.

T. M. Carnegies Give Luncheon

Carter B. Carnegie, of Pittsburgh, was among the guests at a luncheon Monday given by the T. Morrison Carnegies at White Sulphur Springs. Others there were the Frank L. Polks and Alice L. Polk. Mr. Polk was Secretary of State during the Wilson administration.

* * *

Mrs. Morgan B. Schiller was a recent guest at the Weylin, New York, and Miss Mary C. Chaplin, of Sewickley, was registered at the Waldorf-Astoria.

For the Civic Playhouse production next week of "The Dark Tower" a number of the younger set will usher. They'll be Kathleen Murray, Helen Birmingham, Marjorie Anderson, June Conneely, Katherine Berger, Nancy Henderson, Alice Kleinhans, Virginia Wickerham and Jean Jenks.

Rose Anne Hyman Engaged to Wed

Miss Rose Anne Hyman, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hyman's daughter, has chosen October 7 as the date on which she will marry Elmer Breyer, of McKeesport. The wedding is to take place at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Wigle street.

Miss Elsie Mooney Weds Wilkinsburg Man

Miss Elsie Mooney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Mooney, of Braddock, and William H. Venable, of Wilkinsburg, were married Saturday morning in St. Thomas' rectory with the Rev. Albert McDonald officiating.

The bride wore blue chiffon velvet and cream lace with a blue hat and carried pink rosebuds and lilies of the valley. Her sister, Miss Ann Mooney, of Harrisburg, was maid of honor and wore brown moire trimmed in pink with a matching hat and carried pink rosebuds and lilies of the valley. The bride's brother, Daniel Mooney, was best man.

There was a wedding breakfast for 60 guests in the Mooney home after which Mr. and Mrs. Venable left for Lake Lure, N. C. They will be at home in Swissvale after they return.

Ligonier Women Plan Exhibit

The Woman's Club of Ligonier is planning its annual flower show for Saturday, September 8, in the Fort Ligonier Hotel, where this annual event has taken place for years. While the club sponsors the show it does not limit its entries to club members. Indeed, it encourages a general interest in growing both vegetables and flowers.

The show will be free to the public and will remain open over Sunday, the ninth. It will be preceded, as usual, by the club luncheon at the hotel with a special program of music and speeches.

Jane McClure Is Bride of Ohioan

At 4:30 o'clock in the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Irwin McClure, of Vandergrift, on Saturday, their daughter, Miss Jane Irwin McClure, became the bride of Porter Crane McKinnon, son of Mrs. Fred K. Lewis, of Ashtabula, O.

The Rev. C. W. Barnes officiated. The bride's gown was of white lace made with a slight train, and she wore a shoulder spray of gardenias. Her sister, Mrs. John I. Cole, was matron of honor and wore dark blue chiffon. Robert Turner, of Ashtabula, was best man.

Mrs. McKinnon is a graduate of Pennsylvania State College, and the bridegroom is also a Penn State graduate and took postgraduate work at Massachusetts Tech.

Club Sets Date for Show

Friday, September 11, has been set as the date for the Penn-Hebron Garden Club's fall flower show at the clubhouse in Jefferson road. Plans for the exhibit are to be discussed September 6.

Miss Jean Kintner, who was graduated from Ambler School of Horticulture last spring, will assist her mother, Mrs. J. L. Kintner, with the decorating. Mrs. Thomas S. Elliott is chairman of the exhibit committee and Mrs. Wallace Alberts of the children's exhibits.

The door committee includes Mrs. Marshall Taylor, Mrs. J. A. Blank and Mrs. J. O. Challant. Mrs. H. C. Burton heads the kitchen committee, with Mrs. E. C. Young, Mrs. Joseph Bayer and Mrs. William Heimer assisting and Mrs. William Bryson, chairman of aides, has Mrs. W. A. Snyder, Mrs. Frank Keppel and Mrs. Albert Guhs in their group. Mrs. Kintner's decorating committee includes her daughter and Mrs. J. C. McCutcheon, Mrs. Anne Lawrence and Mrs. Howard Miller. Cakes will be in charge of Mrs. Henry Vance, Mrs. T. J. Klingensmith and Mrs. Henry Ritz, and teas, of Mrs. Mary Barclay, Mrs. Harry Duff and Mrs. Mary Hood.

Composers Are to Be Studied

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

It's certainly an original fashion which the music department of the Mt. Lebanon Woman's Club has adopted for its study during the coming season. Not only will famous composers be featured during the month in which they were born, but members whose birth months coincide with those of the composers will present their compositions.

The program has been titled "Composer of the Month," with "Melody Calender" as the subcaption. August Fischer will discuss the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, and Ernest Lunt, the chorals of England. S. Powell Middleton, supervisor of music in Mt. Lebanon schools, will also speak.

The melody calendar includes a Christmas cantata, a May festival and a self-explanatory program called "Hits From Our Passing Shows." Sara Jamison Logan will sing compositions by Marianne Genet, Pittsburgh composer, and Mrs. Edward H. Gallop will give a piano recital.

Mrs. Carl Cappel will serve as accompanist, with Mrs. A. Volmrich as her assistant.

Through the Spyglass

VIEWING THE NEW

You little shoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 6500 . . . and ASK FOR THE SPY GLASS. Or send in a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply. THE SPY GLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

Satin has "slipped" into the lingerie boxes of the smarter feminine souls this season! Satin slips . . . that have . . . nice detail like good tailoring as to seams, and plain or lace finishing.

In fact, one of the stores has quite done themselves proud with the new satins they have brought out. Good quality slips that are going to sell for $1.65 . . . in tea-rose or white . . . with straight or V-tops and low-cut backs In sizes 34 to 44 . . . and a buy at the price!

Now when you say "$22.50 for a dress" . . . you usually expect something nice . . . and new . . . and pretty much RIGHT in every way, don't you? So that when we say these new fall frocks for WOMEN are even more than we'd expect at the price . . . you women size 38 to 44 will know that here is the answer to your autumnal prayers!

Beautiful crepes . . . brown or black shot through and through with twinkling gold threads (all that glitters may not be "gold"—but it certainly looks like it!)

Note well the new effect of the deep gilet that folds at the sides and plasters itself all down your frontage! In the case of the black, this is emerald . . . on the brown, it is tangerine . . . and on each frock it is buttoned down flat at the waistline (approximately) with three "golden" buttons! All very new . . . very smart . . . and very flattering to women who prefer something distinctive and yet suited to their type.

Not since we were something of a little girl have we seen patent leather pumps for men! (Or are we just dumb?) And certainly we didn't realize that they were creeping up on us as they have been in the Eastern men's colleges this past year! (Or are we just old and behind-the-times?)

But anyway . . . we have found the place in town where they are hiding out. Patent pumps for manly feet (that may take a size goodness-knows-what during football practice during the week) . . . but certainly will want a pair of these for the week-end festivities. They're wearing them . . . with tails, 'tis true. But never say that we haven't done our best by you and your collegians!

And in almost the same breath . . . the news about the new leather that some of the smartest, most durable, and comfortable campus shoes for lady bookworms use! Norwegian veal . . . and you don't eat it either! A very soft, pliable leather that will take your 10 toes and all your little arches over anything from spongy green golf turf to the rough and rocky roads on a 10-mile tramp! And . . .

In two styles! A T-strap number that comes in brown only . . . or a brogue (as sturdy and dependable as its name!) This last in black or brown. Priced at $10.50 . . . and worth every dime of it. (For there's almost no wear out to them, we might add).

Six Recipes, Each With a Difference

By PRUDENCE PENNY

There is not a single prize winning recipe in today's list that does not merit being designated as "just a little different." All six of today's recipes seem to have as their theme song, the elucidation of vegetable. Red hots (wieners to you) appear in one recipe. The remaining five recipes are meatless, which makes today's list an excellent one to keep on hand for meatless Fridays, fast days or any other day when meat is not included on the menu.

Not that we have anything against meat—far from it—it just happened by coincidence that most of today's recipes were meatless. Just as on another day, perhaps, the trend will run strongly in favor of meat dishes.

Recipes, recipes—in a never-ending stream they come in each day to Prudence Penny. Send your favorite recipe in. Sorry, we cannot return any submitted, but who knows, one of yours may be chosen for one of the daily six prize winners. Five dollars is awarded for the best recipe and five one-dollar prizes for the five next best. Send yours in today. You've nothing to lose and everything to gain. Here are today's prize winners:

Candidate Favors Police Elimination

Herbert T. Ames, of Williamsport, dry candidate for Governor, proposed to eliminate all local police forces in favor of a state constabulary that would patrol the entire commonwealth, "freed from political and local influence," at a meeting of the state Prohibition party committee in the William Penn Hotel.

George D. Harger, of Pittsburgh, was re-elected state chairman of the party at the meeting yesterday. Hattie E. Johnston, of Crafton, was elected treasurer and Sara Pollard, of Pittsburgh, was named secretary.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS, :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

Tactics of Gay '90's Won't do in 1934

Never letting him know she cares for him. And now that she seems to be losing him, she is very much perturbed . . . Such letters as these come to the Speak Up, Sisters, column ever so often . . .

This attitude of Miss 1934 is a carryover from the days when to be a lady was to be sweet and simpering and full of headaches, and subtle inhibitive qualities which made love for the man a thing of hide and seek . . .

This was a goodly performance when this country was young and when sentiment was to be had in pocketfuls . . . But now that even pockets have gone out of style, we must strike another attitude, sisters . . .

Miss Brunot

There are so many other things besides the one girl to interest the men. . . . There is golf, and getting on in a complex age, and other men to go out with. There are night clubs and girls who practice the art of come-hither in a manner that would have besmeared the reputation of the earlier period lassie to the extent that she would have been branded for the remainder of her years.

Telephones have changed our outside ethics . . . Trips in the flivver have changed the ways even of Dan Cupid.

ADMIT LOVE

And yet some girls even today go on being shyly romantic . . . In a way it is pleasant. But a little hard on the girls. . . . It seems to me that in this modern bedlam . . . in this maelstrom of going hither and thither . . . , in this ever-changing period of scenic activity, if I were a girl, and a fellow kept asking me if I loved him, and if I did, I'D SAY SO . . . For if I didn't, I'd be fully aware that the girl next door would do so. . . .

That is the advice I'M giving Sue R.

So, Sue, perk up . . . Get your man back by following him around just a little . . . Not too evident, however . . . Talk with him, and ask him why he hasn't been up to see you lately . . . Even use the Mae West phase if expedient . . . Let him see you have MISSED HIM . . . That may work wonders.

If not, the old adage of good fish being still in the sea will come in handy . . . For it is true today, as it was yesterday.

PUPPY LOVE

Dear Miss Brunot:

Everyone I talk to laughs at my longing love for a certain young man.

My parents laugh, and say it is only puppy love. In my 19 years of life, I've had a few love affairs, but now I am able to distinguish puppy love from the real sort.

I'm still in love with a young man whom I gave up three months ago. When we kept company he spoke about a certain girl to me. I gave this no second thought, as I thought our happiness complete.

The turning point happened when at a skating party with some friends, who should appear but my boy friend. While we skated together he professed his love. And yet imagine my astonishment when he took the girl home whom he had mentioned before.

OTHER GIRL HIS CHOICE

The next night he called for me as usual. I told him exactly how I felt and I was through being made fun of. He made me promise to remain his friend. Yet he went on to say that his real choice was the other girl.

I attended the same functions as he, and his eyes were always upon me. It was as if those eyes of his were trying to bridge the gulf between us. His friend told me, it was a one-sided affair, and it was the other girl who was continually chasing him. She was ever at his heels.

Every opportunity he gets he talks to me. He inquired what I was doing and what men I was going with.

He was never seen at this girl's home, but as she was what the men call a good sport, she had a swell chance to see him elsewhere. Now, I feel I could have him if I wanted him, and this girl even circulated this rumor herself. What shall I do? I am awaiting your answer. DISCOURAGED.

This girl you are up against is a wise one, and she believes in burning all bridges before she takes a real step . . . That is why she so cleverly circulated the rumor she did.

ALL'S FAIR IN LOVE

You know, there are some people, both men and women, who don't care a whoop what people think, not even the person in question, if they but manage to win where love is concerned. You are vieing with this kind.

If you really like this fellow and you feel sure you could win him if you tried, why not forget the skating party incident and go in for victory? . . . A girl of 19 often knows her own heart . . . Everyone may tell you what you suffer from is puppy love, in order that you do not take the affair so seriously.

They may think the other girl has the inside track . . . And it does look somewhat that way . . . Even so, hope and work bring tremendous results.

ASKS HIM TO CALL

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am in love with a fellow of 21, and I am 19. We had a little trouble, and we separated. He went away to school and I did not see him for nearly a year. But now when he sees me, he speaks pleasantly. Tell me what to do.

A Broken Heart

Get into conversation with this young man, and ask him to your home, Broken Heart . . . No doubt, he will come eagerly . . . surely . . . then, if you act tactfully, he will be your boy friend once more . . . And here's luck to you!

PERSONS IN HIGH PLACES TODAY SET POOR EXAMPLES, FAY KING OBSERVES

By FAY KING

It is a pity that those in high places so often set such poor examples.

Sometimes, I think that never has there been such a poor lot of prominent persons for the people to look toward, with that common trait for hero worship and imitation.

Too many of those who are now outstanding personalities demand that we condone in them what we are inclined to condemn in lesser persons.

Among them we see too many broken homes, too much philandering, too much greed.

It is time we turned to our humbler neighbors, for that worthy inspiration that will help us carry on in the right way.

Wrong can never be right, even when the highest would make it seem so.

Word From Hospital Reassures Madge

Lillian put a comforting arm around my shoulders as I cried out that I ought to be shot for speaking captiously of Edith Fairfax's attitude toward Dicky, when I did not yet know the result of the hospital examination of his drawing arm, which had been grazed by the mysterious shot from the woodland glade.

"Don't be an anointed idiot just because you know how," she said, in the phraseology that has become so familiar and so dear to me from its association with numberless times when she has encouraged me, and "stayed my sinking spirit," with her homely and shrewd philosophy. "What difference does it make whether we toast Edith brown at this particular session or at another one? It's no disloyalty to the Dicky-bird; I can tell you that. He'd be holding one end of the gridiron if he were here."

"If he were here," I echoed. "If he were only here!"

"He'll be here before you are ready to see him, if you don't look out," she said, and I sprang from my seat, my comb and brush dropping to the floor.

"You've heard from the hospital!" I said excitedly. "What did they say? What about his arm?"

RESTING WELL

"Gently! Gently!" she said, stooping and retrieving my brush and comb. "You're getting ahead of the story, and there's no need to break the crockery. I haven't heard anything about his arm, for the simple reason that they haven't made the examination yet. But I did telephone the hospital."

"What did they say?" I interjected breathlessly.

"That the patient had passed a very comfortable night," she said with a little moue, "just as I predicted they would. They were going to make the examination very shortly. In fact"—she consulted her wrist watch—"they're in all probability at it now.

"And you know wild horses can't keep Dicky in any hospital, once the absolute necessity for his being there is off! Also, there'll be a plenty for you to do in the hour or so that will drop from the sands of time before he gets here. So put your hair up,"—she handed me my brush and comb with a flourish—"and get ready to play quite a difficult little piece on your piano."

I did not speak until I had put the last hairpin into my hurried coiffure. Then, as I slipped off my rumpled gown and took another down from the hangers in my closet, I put the question which had been trembling on my lips since her little speech.

"What do you mean by that cryptic utterance?" I asked. "Have you seen father?"

"Have I seen father!" she apostrophized, lifting her hands high above her head, then letting them drop inertly at her side. "Have I seen anything else but father in the last hour? The dear old chief has been the busiest cup of tea you ever saw, dashing in and out of Lee Chow's room, and doing sentry-go outside Hugh's in the hope that Dr. Braithwaite would decide Hugh might be wakened."

She sat down in the nearest chair, crossed her knees and clasped her hands luxuriously behind her head.

"I might as well be comfortable while I tell you the story," she said, and then waited until I had snapped the last fastener on my dress before she spoke again.

GREEK MEETS GREEK

"Don't do another thing," she adjured me. "You look as if the well-known bandbox had cradled you. Sit down and listen to the tale of the two strong men from the ends of the earth, who came face to face a while ago."

She was smiling whimsically, and as I obediently sat down in a chair opposite her, I realized that something had happened to rouse her always ready sense of humor.

"Greek certainly met Greek when your father and Dr. Braithwaite locked horns over awakening Hugh," she said. "The chief, than whom there is nobody in the world more considerate, evidently needs Hugh's advice or help badly, and goes on the theory that in time of war or great emergency, all hosbow to the exigencies of the pital and medical rules should situation.

"But Dr. Braithwaite, either because he is a stickler for his rights or—well, for some other reason—has absolutely refused to permit Hugh to be wakened. The last I saw of them they were eying each other with the brotherly love of two Kilkenny cats."

But I hardly heard her, for a terrifying interpretation of Dr. Braithwaite's ruling had come to me.

"Lillian!" I cried. "Do you suppose that Hugh is in worse condition than we thought, and that that is the reason for Edwin's stand?"

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Beauty questers are forever seeking magic lotions that will enlarge the pupils of the eyes, make orbs sparkle. The use of drugs that make this transformation are harmful, never should be used except by an eye specialist.

There are two reliable eye brighteners, possible to almost any girl—health and animation.

Sagging facial muscles are a horror to any woman who is afflicted with them. They can be toned by the use of lubricating cosmetics and light tapping movements with the finger tips. Cold water hardens fibers by stimulating blood streams.

An egg white pack is used in beauty shops. Whip the egg, spread on; in 15 minutes remove with cold water.

FRIENDSHIP FAN PATTERN 460

From the earliest quilt-making days to the present time, the Friendship Fan has been a favorite with the quilt-maker. In it, she can use all the gay scraps that she has saved and the more varied they are, the gayer the quilt. It goes together so quickly for the patches are so simple in form. Its name, Friendship Fan, comes from that pleasant old-time custom of friends gathering to make a quilt block donating their materials for the making.

Pattern 460 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A Campaign That Worked

[This is one of a series of articles in which Mrs. Culbertson explains certain principles of the new Culbertson System of Play. The examples and rules in these articles have never been published heretofore and are exclusive in Pittsburgh with the Sun-Telegraph.]

Most Bridge players are intelligent—if they were not, they could not play Bridge.

Mrs. Culbertson

Since they are intelligent, and highly so, it is hard to deceive a Bridge player if he has as much chance to worry about the danger of being fooled as his opponent has to plan the means of fooling him. It is usually a sound principle of tricky play that the trickster should endeavor to catch his desired victim off guard. Often it is desirable either to camouflage the true nature of a hand or to give an opponent a logical opportunity to make a mistake. In either case, the first consideration is to create the misleading situation as early in the hand as possible so that there can have been no opportunity for accurate card reading.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ A 6 5 ♡ A Q ◇ Q 10 7 5 2 ♣ A K 3
♠ K 10 ♡ K 3 ◇ A K 6 ♣ J 10 9 8 4 2	West / North / East / South	♠ Q 9 8 ♡ 9 7 5 4 ◇ J 9 8 4 ♣ 7 5
	♠ J 7 4 3 2 ♡ J 10 8 6 2 ◇ 3 ♣ Q 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♣	3 ◇	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♣ (!)	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
Pass	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—Even though delayed for one round, a forcing bid showing control of clubs.

South considered himself a much better player than his opponents, and even when he saw his terrible hand he hoped to talk East and West out of whatever they deserved from their cards by making a psychic bid. He found to his horror that North's hand was so good that hardly any measures could staunch the flow of Forcing bids which emanated from his lips, and before the flood had subsided the contract was five spades, vulnerable and doubled. North almost redoubled, but he saw South's highly unethical but almost condonable look of piteous supplication just in time.

West opened the diamond King and shifted to the club Jack, which South won with the Queen. Now South led a heart and finessed, the Queen winning the trick. The contract still seemed hopeless, since against any distribution but a doubleton King-Queen of spades, two trump tricks must be lost; but South thought he saw a way of overcoming his difficulty. He led the King of clubs and then the Ace. A moment of elementary analysis would have told East that South was also out of the suit and that nothing could be gained by trumping, but all East thought of was preventing South from discarding a loser. Here again East's reasoning was faulty, because West, with only two diamonds, would have opened the Ace, and since West was thus placed with three diamonds, South must have had a singleton.

A discard from a long heart suit could not help him. But South had played the cards one after the other, not fast enough to inconvenience East, but without any pausing to think. East had not had time between plays to stop and read the various distributions around the table, and seeing a high card led which would win a trick if allowed to hold, he ruffed automatically.

This was just the contingency South had been working for. The spade 8 was overruffed by the Jack and the Ace and another spade 8 was oversuit. West tried to win the setting trick with his diamond Ace, but it was too late, for South ruffed. Then the King of hearts fell on the Ace and South had nothing left but winning tricks.

Straightforward play would not have given South a chance to make his contract; but by creating an opportunity for East to err, he avoided a sure losing trick which was worth several hundred points to him.

TOMORROW'S HAND

South, dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

	♠ K 2 ♡ 10 9 8 ◇ A Q J 7 6 3 ♣ 8 3
♠ Q 9 6 ♡ K 3 2 ◇ 4 ♣ A 10 9 7 6 4	West / North / East / South	♠ 8 7 5 4 3 ♡ 7 6 5 4 ◇ K 8 ♣ Q 2
	♠ A J 10 ♡ A Q J ◇ 10 9 5 2 ♣ K J 5

This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Sensitivity Tests Are Beneficial in Asthma

Though asthma is a common affliction of adults, it is amazing to learn of the number of children who suffer from it. It may well be that the disease is hereditary, because it appears to run in families of which other members have been afflicted with asthma or other similar ailments, such as hives, eczema and hay fever.

Dr. Copeland

The treatment of asthma has been pretty discouraging. But of late many cases among children have been treated with considerable success. When that has happened, the young sufferers have been rescued from a prolonged and disabling disease. It might even be said that many lives have been saved, because a good many victims of asthma have had serious complications involving the heart or lungs.

Asthmatic children have a peculiar sensitiveness to some one protein substance. Among the offending proteins, we find them in such foods as egg white, cereals, milk, fish, nuts and potatoes. There are other foods, too, that are capable of causing attacks of asthma.

It is interesting that it is not in the starch, sugar or fat that the trouble lies. It is always in one of the proteins, which is the body and tissue-building material of our foods.

Fortunately, the particular one of the foods responsible for it can be determined by the so-called "sensitivity test." In making this test a small amount of the suspected substance is applied to a light scratch on the skin. If the individual is sensitive to that substance, a characteristic wheal or swelling appears at the site of the application. In this way it is possible often accurately to determine the offending substance. Once this irritating material is discovered and kept from the child, he is free from attacks.

The sensitivity may not be due to a food protein. The child may react to house dust, ragweed, feathers, animal dandruff, grass pollen, or even silk. Similar tests can also be made for these substances to see if one of them is the source of trouble.

Relief is obtained by removing the offending substance from the diet, by change in environment, or by guarding against contact with the irritating substance. In addition, injections of certain vaccines are given regularly, over definite intervals, and are continued for a considerable time. Results have been extremely gratifying in a considerable percentage of cases.

Adults suffering from asthma may receive the same sensitivity tests as children. In many instances satisfactory relief is obtained, although the treatments have not proved as beneficial as with the children.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Announcing the Engagement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—What would be the proper way to announce a couple's engagement, if the girl's mother is not living? The girl lives with her father at her aunt's home. Her aunt is her father's sister. Would it be proper if her aunt announced the engagement?

2—At an engagement party what proceedings are carried on?

3—What is usually served at an engagement party? L.

1—It would be the best form for your father to announce your engagement.

2—An engagement party is just like any other party, with the addition of some way of announcing the betrothal news. One way is to have the engaged couple receive their friends as they enter the living room, the young woman saying, as she greets the guests, "And this is my fiance," or, if the person does not know the fiance, "And may I present my fiance, Mr. John Bryan." Or the young lady, after the party is well started, may slip her engagement ring onto "the" finger, someone soon discovers it, and the news is out.

3—The refreshments served at such a party depends on the time of day and the kind of a party. This party may be a luncheon, a dinner, a tea or a supper party.

A Gift for Her Teacher

My teacher of a previous year has been aiding me for the last few months in my studies. I wish to give her some nice gift. She has refused to take any money whatsoever.

My father manages a woman's apparel shop, if clothing would be a suitable gift. If so, how should I send it as I do not know her size or what she would like.

If this won't do, will you kindly suggest something else? F.

I'm one of the ones who think that plain white handkerchiefs, beautifully monogrammed, is one of the perfect gifts. In your father's shop wouldn't that be a possible gift? You might choose some handkerchiefs for day wear, and some "small squares" for evening wear; or one or two beautiful scarves; or a purse, for day wear, or a white one for evening wear.

BIG BUSINESS BEAUTY SUES FOR MILLION

United News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Vivian Hunter, former Enfield beauty who made good in the big, bad business world as confidential secretary to Gunnar Axel Larson, millionaire cement manufacturer, is suing her former employer for a million dollars for because she lost her job.

Confidential secretarial jobs at $200 per week with a life contract aren't easy to find, what with the depression and all, says Vivian, and she lists several oddest items to bring up the total.

She charges that Larsons socked her in the jaw during a European business jaunt, and although she says he paid the doctors' bills, she considers that socko, worth $600,000.

Then, she says, that life contract at $200 per week, WITH an expectancy of 35 more years of life, would amount up to $350,000.

The other $50,000 is four jewelry which she charges Larsons took to have reset, but didn't return. Put it all together and it spells one million dollars.

Vivian's attorney, Jerrome A. Jacobs, has asked for an October trial of the suit before Supreme Court Justice Charles J. Dodd. Larson, who is in Europe, has issued a general denial of the charges.

FLY EXPRESS OVER SEA

Two Pittsburgh firms were notified today of the arrival of "first flight" express shipments in the Latin Americas, where the packages had been sent via the new International Air Express.

The express line, which speeds shipments three to 40 times faster than before, is conducted under an arrangement between the American Railway Express Agency and the Pan-American Airways system.

Shipments will be carried by rail or air-rail express from off-airline points to international express terminals at Miami, Brownsville, El Paso and Los Angeles.

The Pittsburgh express packages were from the H. H. Robertson Company to Panama City and the Harbison-Walker Refractories Company to Buenos Aires.

EXPLAIN BILLS, MILLVALE TOLD

Bills of the Borough of Millvale, together with statements of liabilities and expenditures should be read in open council, so Martin Connelly, Millvale councilman contends and yesterday obtained a mandamus order in Common Pleas Court against Council to show cause why it should not be done.

His action was directed against M. J. Quinlan, the borough secretary, and the other members of the borough's law-making body. Connelly contends that bills are presented to standing committees of council, but that they are not read for approval before the council as a body. He avers that no mention is made as to the amounts, to whom payable or what they are for. Connelly's motion's to have them read have always been defeated.

Receiver Denied Cut In 12-Year Term

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Anthony R. Jackson, former Williamsport attorney and receiver in bankruptcy for the United States Court of Middle Pennsylvania District, has lost his appeal for reduction of his 12-year jail sentence on charges of embezzlement.

The 12-year sentence was imposed last year. Jackson is accused of embezzling $174,441 from bankrupt estates.

BOLT DAMAGES THREE HOMES

Three Squirrel Hill families today swept up the debris caused by a freak lightning bolt that jumped from one house to another during the rainstorm late yesterday.

In the Harry A. Kraeling home, at 5441 Albemarle avenue, two brothers, Harry, 24, and Jack, 18, were at work in their third floor study when the bolt struck.

Plaster fell as a hole opened in the ceiling. And simultaneously, the door split, a mirror cracked and airplane models exploded into a thousand fragments. The two were knocked to the floor shocked, but not seriously injured.

Apparently the bolt leaped from the Kraeling home to the I. Benjamin Rosensweig home at 5435 Albemarle avenue, where it tore another hole in the roof. Flying bricks from the Kraeling home also broke windows on all three floors of the adjoining R. F. Crawford residence.

WIFE NO. 1 WARS ON MEXICAN DIVORCE

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Aug. 29.—(AP.)—The validity of a Mexican divorce in Pennsylvania is slated for a test in the Lawrence County courts.

Mrs. Alice B. Gordon, in a divorce libel against her husband, Cecil B. Gordon, alleges that his marriage to Mary Leslie, of Pittsburgh, after receipt of Mexican divorce, is a bigamist one.

The Gordons were married in 1920. Early this summer, it is claimed, Gordon went to Mexico and obtained the divorce, after which he married the Pittsburgh woman.

Later Mrs. Gordon libeled her husband into court on an process charging him with failure to pay for her support and that of two children. Upon his agreement to continue payments, the litigation was dropped until filing of Mrs. Gordon's divorce libel yesterday.

FAIR CROWDS SEE DOG SHOW, PLANE CONTESTS

NEW YORK Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Likely the most successful of the revolving army of old-time theatrical producers, Sam H. Harris is the Rialto's greatest enigma. He has no office hours, does nothing by rote and is writing while the easiest hour in a business [illegible] dominated by deal-promoting lives.

Only a production is launched, he is seldom around the theater where it is playing. Even at rehearsals he sits obscurely in the back of the house, leaving details of whipping a show into shape to others. He picks the best material he can find and trusts them.

There are never telephone pleas or threatening notes about this and that, theatrically affairs drift rudderless but his shows are generally packed. A swarthy little pine knot of a man with a puckered expression, there is a legend he is lonesomest in the theatrical area.

When he dines out, it's usually at Dinty Moore's with some jester such as Arthur Caesar and a bevy of bright maidens of the stage. He is the generous host who sits silently and glumly, listening but not apparently hearing. Abruptly, with a quick nod he may get up and walk away. But the chit is always paid.

A somewhat new type of criminal pretends to play tag around women on the sidewalks. Dodging in and out, one manages to snatch a purse and escape. The same tag trick is worked when cars halt at traffic stops by jumping on the running board and reaching into the auto. They nearly got a certain lady's purse today.

Few knew of Will Rogers' sentimental flying journey across the continent just before taking off with his wife and two sons for the Orient. Five days before his departure he was glum at breakfast. To his wife he confessed: "I want to see Mary!" His daughter was playing in stock near Boston. Two hours later he was on his way to spend the day with her.

The newest wrinkle in metropolitan flying, the 19½-minute trip by seaplane from Oyster Bay to Wall street, has caught on with a bang and is usually crowded. But, of course, everybody, including the passengers, wonder why there is such a hurry to get to Wall street these days.

ground she knows so well—the theatrical boarding house and the rigors of trouping in one-horse towns. Miss Pickford, next to the screen, prefers writing as a means of expression and confesses she has in odd moments filled a trunk with her efforts. She is contracted for a full-length novel.

S. N. Behrman, the playwright and author of the smash "Biography," has but one hobby. In his leisure he writes somewhat reproachful letters to passengers scheduled to sail on German-owned boats. Mr. Behrman does not care for Chancellor Hitler.

One of the casual droppers-in today was an old crony of the news-rooms. He lives now on the broad acres of a Montana ranch, turning out western fiction, factory fashion, and living a fabulous life. Of all hypochondriacs — and the writing woods are filled with 'em—his special malady is the most baffling. The difficulty is some odd physiological hypnosis that makes the theater he so loves forbidden land. Invariably after the curtain rises his hands break out in a rash and maddening itch of tiny water blisters. The movies which interest him but mildly have no such effect.

The British Empire Building in Radio Center has become America's Burlington Arcade

siphoning a spray of haberdashers, hat makers and sundry purveyors of sartorial accessories. The "clarks" are as Londonish as Simpson's and I hear many of them are "paying guests" in an old-time mansion, converted into a sort of club with an amusing Cockney landlady, on upper Central Park West.

My favorite Cockney remark—which I like to repeat at least annually—is that of a spry steward on the Aquatania for whom I rang wanly one stormy crossing when I thought the ship had made its last terrific lurch. Beaming and swaying in the doorway, he chirped: "A bit tippy, sir!"

FIREMAN FINED, DRUNKEN ROW CHARGED

Accused of Striking Woman With Chair, Hitting Landlord

John Haggerty, 36, of 324 Jacksonia street, a fireman attached to No. 43 Engine Company, was fined $25 with the alternative of 30 days in jail on a disorderly conduct charge by Magistrate Anthony Lucas in North Side Police Court, today. Haggerty is under suspension pending a trial board hearing.

Alex Shapiro, 52, owner of an apartment house at 18 Jacksonia street and occupant of the first floor, released today from Allegheny General Hospital, appeared against Haggerty.

Shapiro testified he investigated a woman's screaming on the second floor of his building early Sunday and found Haggerty intoxicated, had broken up furniture and had struck the woman with a chair. He also attacked Shapiro, the latter said, and he suffered a fractured sinus bone.

Haggerty testified he resented Shapiro's interfering. He said he had been keeping company with Mrs. Margaret Farabaugh for three years and that an argument developed on their way home from a picnic. Haggerty said he was divorced and that Mrs. Farabaugh had been separated from her husband for eight years.

Shapiro said he would prefer a charge of assault and battery against Haggerty before an alderman.

BROKE LIQUOR LAW, 3 FINED

Charged with violating the state liquor laws, Lydia Giannelo, 23, was fined $25 or 30 days to jail today by Magistrate Anthony Lucas.

The woman was arrested last night when police raided a house at 40 Clay way and seized a small quantity of alleged moonshine whisky. Also arrested in the raid were Sam Gianello, Battista Lugiana, 59, of 69 Washington street, and James Wajnagh, 53, of Cecil. The three men were discharged.

Magistrate Lucas today fined Tony Bruno, 50, $50 or 30 days to jail and Louis Smith, 37, $25 or 30 days to jail for an alleged violation of the state liquor laws. The two men were arrested yesterday in a raid at 72 Chatham street, where police say they found a quantity of moonshine.

Frank Swann, 57, Negro, of Bellevue, arrested in Fernando street yesterday and accused of having numbers slips in his possession, was discharged today.

BUYERS WARNED ON WEIGHTS

Don't accept less than you are entitled to in goods, any more than you would in money is the advice given to the public yesterday by the Allegheny County Bureau of Weights and Measures.

Some of the suggestions offered were:

"Don't buy goods that are weighed with scales marked 'not legal in trade.'"

"See that all package goods have the 'net weight' of contents, printed or stamped on container.

"Order commodities in terms of weights and measures, not a 'pail of lard,' '30 cents worth of potatoes' or 'a piece of bacon.'"

PEDDLER FLEES WITH 2 RINGS

Mrs. A. Block of 3749 Beechwood boulevard, is through with peddlers, particularly those who sell wax paper.

Late yesterday an unidentified man, about 21, called upon her and offered to sell her some wax paper. Mrs. Block, examining it, remaked that it looked as though the paper had been used before. The peddler, angered, snatched the paper from her hands and left.

Several minutes later Mrs. Block discovered her two rings, one valued at $1,500 and another at $200, fastened to her dress by a safety pin, were missing. She told detectives that when the man snatched the paper from her he also snatched her rings.

A string of pearls, women's wearing apparel, two pairs of policemen's trousers and five pawn tickets were stolen from the home of Mrs. Pearl Missick, of 4723 Blair street, late yesterday. Thieves entered her home by forcing a rear window.

The butcher shop of Ballon and Finkelstein, of 1716 Wylie avenue, was entered and robbed of meats valued at $15. Two dollars in cash was taken from the cash register. Entrance was gained by forcing a rear window.

'Little King' Wings Away, He'll Be Back in Week

A tear in his better eye. The Little King today had waved a reluctant farewell to Pittsburgh. But his last words were that he was saying so-long and not goodby.

The Little King had the hangover of an innocent but busy man.

He had been in Pittsburgh 24 hours and he had crowned Mayor McNair as one of his willing jesters; he had seen a dozen burlesque show cuties; he had driven a fire engine; he had eaten a banana, and he had gone to the county fair.

TO RETURN IN WEEK

For the Little King that he was, this was more than enough.

The Little King said he would return Sunday a week. And so he will, in his right character, as the leading man of a new comic strip in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

The Little King stepped off a TWA airplane and departed on one. And he was costumed in his rightful regalia—crown, red raiment and boots.

Now, the little guy who was inside all this stuff was none other than Otto Soglow, the artist who created "The Little King."

MISSED MERRY-GO-ROUND

Soglow said it was rather stuffy under all those layers, but he stuck with the ship. He boasted that he had but one life to give for King Features, his bosses.

The Little King spent yesterday at the county fair. He seldom speaks, but through a cordon of spokesmen he allowed one complaint to become known: he was gravely disappointed that the county fair was without a merry-go-round. It seems he's been trying to catch that brass ring all his life.

FIRST COUSINS DIVORCED

First cousins cannot legally marry in Pennsylvania, Judge Norman T. Bonn decided yesterday in an opinion handed down, divorcing Michael Bapa, of 3229 Wensel avenue, Beechview, from Sadie Bapa, of Graphic avenue.

Judge Bonn held that the marriage, which was performed March 8, 1923, was contrary to the act of Assembly approved June 24, 1901. Mrs. Bapa had contested the action of her husband who sought the divorce. The case was heard by Judge Bonn here some time ago.

SUBURB AGAIN OUT OF WATER

Carnegie Manor, just outside Duquesne, was again without water today, because Harvey R. Worthington, 323 Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh, has not paid his water bill, according to the Duquesne water department.

When he failed to pay a two months' water bill this morning, his water was turned off, officials said. Misunderstandings over water bills have created a water shortage in Worthington's pipe line many times in the past.

Clothing Store Robbed Fifth Time

Thieves paid one of their periodical visits to Al Berk's clothing store at 1013 Fifth avenue early today and made away with four men's suits valued at $75. The garments were taken from a display window broken by a paving brick. It was the fifth time Berk's has been robbed in the past two years.

Annexation of Ingram Probed

City Council is showing no great haste to welcome the Borough of Ingram into the city fellowship. An ordinance giving consent to the annexation of Ingram has been sent to the City Controller for a financial report on the borough's affairs and to the planning commission for study.

ACTOR FOLLOWS WIFE IN DEATH

Edward R. Nieman, "Clark" of the once-famous vaudeville team of Clark and Weston, will be buried beside his wife and stage partner, in Uniondale Cemetery tomorrow.

Nieman died yesterday at his home, 2760 Homehurst street, Overbrook, just three weeks after the death of Mrs. Nieman, who died August 8.

The couple met when each had an individual act in a New York theater. Before the week's engagement was over they had decided to marry and unite the acts.

Dormont Firemen Open Celebration

The annual jubilee of the Dormont Volunteer Fire Department will open at Pioneer and West Liberty avenues tonight. The celebration will continue all week.

We'll Struggle Through Winter With 250 Codes

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Old General Johnson drove off in a four-wheeled huff last week and came back on a bicycle built for twenty-two groups.

They're clipping the General's wings by eliminating the useless and just keeping the hopeless.

We will have to struggle through the winter with only two hundred and fifty codes. Like the men with the hives, we are just scratching the surface.

Seems that General Johnson cannot resign without violating one of his own codes which prohibits anybody going anywhere to escape anything.

MILITARY UNITS ACCEPT PARK MEMORIALS

Thousands Brave Rain To See Parade, Hear Vets Speak

A mass fox and horse show, a Boy Scout and county police program, an aerial exhibition and a model airplane contest will be highlights of the Allegheny County Fair in South Park today.

Nine memorials in honor of World War soldiers in this district were dedicated last night at the park's athletic field with a colorful military ceremony.

A crowd of nearly 20,000 persons watched the mile-long parade of former military and National Guard men form on the field and heard Army officers make acceptance speeches in behalf of their organizations.

CRONKHITE SPEAKS

Maj. J. O. Corbett announced the various units in the parade from the grandstand and Col. Charles C. McGovern, chairman of the County Commissioners, introduced the Army men when spoke.

Maj. Gen. Adelbert Cronkhite, wartime commander of the 80th Division, paid tribute to his unit's memorial. His adjutant, Capt. John Stapleton, reserved it.

Col. William B. Dunlap received the 176th Field Artillery memorial. The 107th Field Artillery memorial was received by Lieut. Col. Harry J. Armor.

Lieut. Roy B. Thomas of the 103rd Field Signal Battalion, received the memorial for his unit. Private John A. Trainor received the Troop H, 1st Pennsylvania Cavalry memorial, and private James L. Syker received the 22nd Division memorial.

MEMORIAL TO POET

The beautiful memorial to Joyce Kilmer, the soldier-poet who wrote "Trees," was received by Sergt. V. O. Fleckenstein, of Company M, 165th Infantry. Kilmer served in the war with the Rainbow Division.

Mrs. Danny Nirella, who sang the national anthem at the opening of the dedication ceremonies, received the World War Nurses' memorial.

Clarence Head, Scout commissioner of Allegheny County Council, received the Boy Scout Mounted Troop headquarters which are located on the fair grounds.

Sterling Morelock, of Company M, 1st Division, who is one of the few men in the United States to receive a Congressional Medal of Honor, and Col. Robert J. Wooddside, who is County Controller, spoke.

THOUSANDS BRAVE RAIN

Showers failed to keep the thousands of spectators from attending the opening of the fair yesterday. A chief attraction was the running and harness races yesterday afternoon.

Exhibits in the fair buildings, all of which are free, were also popular. Among them are the displays of home economics, farm products, machinery, wild animals and live stock.

12:30 to 2:30 p. m.—Horse show.

3 p. m.—Light harness horse races.

Brief Bits From Movieland

Al Jolson is searching around for an idea. He wants to do a new Broadway show, one that will give him the proper setting like "Wonder Bar."

Florence Reed, having completed her movie, "Great Expectations," for Universal, is choo-chooing back to her home in Great Lakes, N. Y.

Fish Thief Shot by Singer

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 29.—Filmland's most unusual burglar has been shot and killed by Ruth Etting. The RKO singing star has a fish pond in her back yard filled with rare fancy specimens. But, during the last two weeks, there has been a mysterious decimation of the fish. Ruth couldn't figure out whether they were being stolen or what. Getting up the other morning, she looked out the window and called for a rifle. A moment later she fired and—at the distance of 30 yards—brought down the thief.

Ruth Etting

It was a bird—apparently of the Kingfisher type. Ruth won't know just what until she gets a report from the University of Southern California.

IT'S TRAGIC ANYWAY

The principals in the affair are not big names in the movies but the story is one of the funniest coming out of Hollywood in a long time. A film colony matron is said to have invited women friends over for lunch and for two tables of bridge. She planned to have creamed mushrooms and told the cook to prepare enough for second helpings. When the dishes went back, however, the cook called her mistress to the kitchen and apologized—she had set the remainder of the mushrooms on a chair and the dog had eaten them. The incident was passed off with laughs until the cook, laboring under excitement, again summoned her mistress to the kitchen. The dog was lying dead in the front yard.

IN INTEREST OF SAFETY

Horrified, the matron called the family doctor, who came right over. After a hurried conference he went into the living room and broke the news. In the interest of safety the ladies should have their stomachs pumped out.

As the distracted hostess bid the last of her guests goodby the gardener in the next yard came over and touched his hat.

"I didn't want to ruin your party, missus," he said, "but your dog was killed by a car. I put him on your lawn."

Jim Thorpe Gets Job

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 29.—Once more friends have stepped in to aid Jim Thrope in his long run of bad luck. The man who has been called the greatest of the All-Americans came to Norman Taurog the other day and asked for any kind of job in "College Rhythm." Jim is too old to be cast as a football player any more and the coaches in the picture were already selected. But Taurog, who has used the great Indian star in all his football pictures, made a spot for Jim as co-technical director with Sam Barry of U. S. C.

Lupe Velez doesn't want to fly east with Johnny Weissmuller for that swimming meet but may do it if he insists . . . "The Merry Widow" developed censor trouble in only a few lines. But changing the rest of the sequence to fit caused several days of added scenes . . . Despite her determination to go on the road with "Mary of Scotland," Helen Hayes may be forced to abandon the plan. The weight of the heavy costumes she wore in the production nearly caused the tiny star a physical breakdown . . . Isabel Jewell has been showing Lee Tracy's ma around M-G-M studio . . . Boots Mallory and Bill Cagney gave his mother and sister, Jean, a taste of night life at Frank Sebastian's Cotton Club.

Kennywood Recalls Jess Hawkins

Kennywood Park will reopen its dance pavilion Saturday night after a week of darkness. The music will be by Jess Hawkins and his Virginians Orchestra, who, more than any others, have won the approval of Kennywood dancers. They have played eight weeks at the park this summer and return at the request of many patrons. They will also play concerts Sunday and for dancing Monday, Labor Day, afternoon and night.

Richman May Do 'Sons o' Guns'

Don't be surprised if you see Harry Richman, the big song and dance man from Cincinnati, in a Columbia picture before long. He has conferred with Harry Cohn, president and producing head of the company, and, 'tis rumored, he will do one of two pictures—"Sons o' Guns," a screen version of the musical stage success, or a story intriguingly entitled "Shake Hands With a Millionaire."

Husk O'Hare's Band At Byerly Crest

Husk O'Hare, "[illegible] gentleman of the air," and [illegible] band are filling their second engagement this season at Byerly Crest, night spot on the Lincoln highway, near Irwin, where they are booked for two weeks. Husk and his gang put on a complete show, in which are featured Ruby Heath, soloist, and Herb Tompkins, baritone.

Seein' Stars :-: By Feg Murray

HOT FROM HOLLYWOOD

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 29.—Hello! The usual hue and cry of the movie village for new faces has been heard again. It is always like that, but the newcomers lack that necessary stage training and dramatic ability. And today it is difficult to say just where tomorrow's stars will be found. E. H. Griffith, the M-G-M director, tosses in an idea—a rather neat solution to a problem that is assuming acute proportions.

Miss Doyle

Griffith claims future stars of the screen will rise, not from the legitimate stage, nor from the extra ranks, but from the obscure troupe of "stand-ins," those unsung, unphotoghaphed workers on film sets.

Griffith's idea opens a new avenue of approach for ambitious youngsters. "Stand-ins," although a tedious task, presents an opportunity to the beginner to learn the mechanics of acting, to gain poise and ease before the camera, to make mental notes of various tricks and gestures employed by different stars, directors and cameramen.

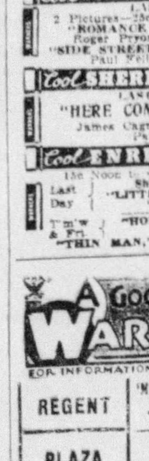
Kent Taylor, the Paramount player, got his chance in the same manner.

Autograph hounds (and the town's full of 'em) were tipped off Jean Harlow had just entered a certain office building in Hollywood. Nearly 50 of the pad-and-pencil toters gathered at the entrance. The elevator operator, however, whispered the news to Jean, who ducked out by the back door and through an alley, where a garbage man yelled at her to sign his wagon!

It was story conference time over the Wheeler and Woolsey giggle-getter. Bert Wheeler arose and said that he felt they, as veteran comics, should have a director with more experience than young George Stevens, who had been assigned the megaphone end. Stevens, quite a wit himself, arose and paced the floor. Finally he said:



Mr. Wheeler

Mr. Stevens is directing Wheeler and Woolsey.

Paul Muni's turning a deaf ear to all those swell Broadway play officers. He likes the easy life of the movies . . . Freeman J. Gosden (Amos, of Amos an' Andy) is trying to hide from sightseers . . . Things are looking up for Jack Mulhall. He's landed a swell role in "Evelyn Prentice" at M-G-M . . . I wonder what has become of Sojin, that swell Oriental villian.

Health Day Tiring

By LLOYD PANTAGES

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 29.—Just in case you think that Norma and Constance Talmadge and Katherine Menzies had an easy time of it at Elizabeth Arden's beauty camp in Maine, get a load of their routine and faint: At 7 a. m. the ladies were rudely awakened to quaff off a glass of hot lemon and bicarbonate of soda; at 7:30 one cup of black coffee and one cup of orange juice; at 8 treatments began with each hour from then on devoted to steam baths, facials and exercises and by way of topping it off, a plunge into the ice lake.

Then luncheon, which brought forth one cup of orange juice and one cup of tea, after which the ladies were forced into a five-mile walk through the woods. Then back for a bit of tennis and having their hair and nails done, and at 7:30 they received one small piece of steak and one minute vegetable, without butter or any seasoning. Then they were allowed to relax with a bridge game or a magazine until 10:30, when the attendants put out all the lights and literally threw them into their downy couches for which they were most happy. Nevertheless, and tough as it may seem, all three of the above ladies have emerged from their rest cure thinner and more beautiful than ever before.

Since I announced that in trying to be a boy again Joe Penner sprained his ankle while trying to do a nifty kick-off, the football squad composing some 32 gentlemen of Duquesne University, Pittsburgh, wrote to Joseph saying that even though he falls down in attempting to play football, he is still their favorite radio and screen comedian. And if he would be kind enough to send on an autographed photograph, it will grace all their programs for the coming season. Such be fame.

Hollywood, the land of every type of mystic, has just unearthed a new one in a color psychologist, who informs Grace Moore that her lucky color is blue. Strange as it all may seem, Miss Moore's favorite color has always been blue. She has never bowed herself in any new stage or screen venture without at least wearing one blue dress.

All In A Day

By MARK HELLINGER

The Gaulden Days.

BETWEEN inhalations of his soup, the Wise Guy favored me with a stare.

"How are the stories coming, Kid?" he inquired. "Must be a little tougher now than it used to be."

"Why?" I asked him.

He pushed his plate from him with a contented burp.

"No more bona fides," he replied. "Seems to me that you used to give us three or four speakeasy stories a week."

I shrugged. The Pollinger, a shrugged guy is he.

"I dunno," I returned. "If I dug up a good speakeasy yarn today I'd run it just the same. You haven't one tucked away in a corner of your alleged brain, have you?"

The Wise Guy looked very thoughtful.

"I might have," he admitted. "As a matter of fact, I'm sure I have. Did I ever tell you about the time that Jimmy the Blink ran a clip joint just around the corner?"

"Nope," I said. "And if you'll keep it short and promise me a wallop at the end, I'll let you spill it to me."

He lit a cigaret and ordered a thick steak—for one.

"Okay," he grinned. "Here we go."

"It was around the end of 1926," he began, "when Jimmy the Blink got his bright idea. He had been hustling booze for the mob ever since the government decided that nobody should hustle booze. But he had never really gotten into the big coin.

"So, with a little coin saved, he felt it was time for him to step out. He didn't have the cash for a large spot, and he compromised by investing in a clip joint.

"You've written a thousand yarns about clip joints, and you know exactly what I mean. Suckers were to be steered to his joint by professional steerers—and the boobs would never be allowed out until they had parted with their bankrolls. Anything was to go in Jimmy's joint; padded checks, doped drinks, women pickpockets, blackmail—anything.

"Most of the steerers to other clip joints around New York were taxi drivers. They received one-third of whatever the sucker went for. But Jimmy went the other joints one better.

"He searched around and hired him a gang of gentlemen that he called promoters. To each one he gave a small yellow card and a sum of cash in advance. It was the job of each promoters to look about for suckers in places that cab drivers would not be able to reach. The promoters were to receive one-half of their personal sucker's check.

"To each of these promoters—and what a mob of assorted clip artists they were!—Jimmy handed a word of advice::

"'Be careful of revenue men,' he said as he handed a man the yellow promoter's card and the advance cash. 'I can't stand a pinch—and the revenue birds are wise to this racket. Be careful.'

"Then he'd let them loose and tell them to go to work."

The Wise Guy ordered a beer—for one. Then—

"The best promoter on Jimmy the Blink's staff was a little fellow named Joey Smith. Seems that the suckers were not running true to form that week, and Jimmy needed one quickly.

"That very evening Joey lived up to his reputation. He struck up a conversation with an elderly gentleman in the lobby of one of the classiest hotels in New York. The elderly gent said he had just completed a business deal and was returning to his home town the following day. Joey posed as a college boy.

"Well, it wasn't long before Joey was attempting to steer his new-found friend over to Jimmy the Blink's. But the dignified old gentleman would have none of it.

"Joey's eyes began to glow. What a soft touch this was! He went to work with a vengeance, pointing out that he had been to Jimmy's place the night before, and that the drinks and the dames were but one step removed from heaven.

"And in twenty minutes, Joey had his sucker seated in Jimmy the Blink's clip joint with two bottles of wine on the table and a dame on each knee . . .

"With things going so prettily, Joey excused himself and went to the bar in the rear of the establishment. The bartender drew him to one side.

"'It's a good thing you got a sucker, Joey,' he said. 'That guy on the other end of the bar is a revenue man—and if he don't get 200 bucks in an hour, the place is finished. Jimmy the Blink is out right now, trying to raise the dough.'

"Joey gave him that confident wink.

"'Get Jimmy on the wire,' he ordered, 'and tell him not to worry. This sucker's good for a fortune before I'm through with him.'

"It was about three hours later when the bartender again called Jimmy the Blink. By this time Jimmy was ready to be tied.

"'What's going on?' he roared. 'Why didn't you call me before? Is the party over? Has the revenue bum been paid off? Is it safe to come back?'

"'There ain't no place to go back to,' said the bartender sadly. 'The joint's been closed up and I am in the can.'

"The bartender sighed.

"'Don't yell at me,' he returned wearily. 'It's all your fault. The sucker wasn't no sucker at all. When I gave him the bill, he winked—and he handed over one of your lousy promoter's cards!'" . . .

Comedian's Imitations To Fade

By AIRCASTER

Mr. George Price, versatile comic of the summer interlude, has returned as of yesterday. Hitherto much of his work has been given to imitations of this celebrity and that, notably Harry Richman. Price has seen a new light and he says:

"All those guys I have been imitating are in the money, and here am I. Imitation is not only sincere flattery, but a handicap. If your mimicry is good, the listener remembers the subject; if bad, he pans the imitator. I'm through with imitations and hope to climb up on my own ladder."

And that ought to be a lesson to many of the singing trio.

BARON TO FADE

If the execs of radio row haven't got their radiac all mixed up, the future looms dark indeed for that intrepid and adventurous character of the air, Baron Munchausen. For his interpreter, Mr. Jack Pearl, the future isn't half so dark, since one hears he is creating another and very different role. But the Baron, with his usual modesty, will bow out, say the oracles, on October 10, when the sponsor shifts to another product.

The gents who bankroll the Baron's show apparently have grown weary of the Baron, but through no fault of Pearl's. When he returned to the air with the show, he had expected to go along without the famous liar and present a fellow equally engaging. But the program directors wanted the advantage of the Baron's build-up and ruled otherwise.

This is another case of doing a good idea to death and placing an artist in a position where his own success brings him the embarrassment of being worn down.

What set-up will succeed the Baron has not been decided upon.

GIBBONS RETURNS

The National Broadcasting Company has had quite a lot of success with programs from the West Coast, and, being thus encouraged, is about to launch another. This will be given at 3 p. m. spot Tuesdays at WCAE, beginning next week and if it clicks, will go night-time.

The new show will feature Dr. Lawrence L. Cross, a Kentucky Colonel sort of chap, who will be supported by a quartet, musical novelties and, of all things, live mocking birds . . .

Globe Trotter

Hello Ladies and Gentlemen:

The problem now is whether I should say what everybody usually does on returning from a vacation—that he had a fine time but there's nothing like getting back to work—or tell the truth and admit how much he enjoyed loafing and dreaded the return to any kind of effort.

I think I'll skip it. If I don't work I don't eat, so I'd better start liking it.

I want to thank all of you who so kindly kept the mail coming in so I would have plenty of material to keep the column rolling when I returned and I want to acknowledge the nice cards and letters from Globe Trotters who wished me a good time and also to those who sent me cards on their vacations.

I hope that Mrs. Schwartz has a fine time. She is about to visit Canada and her question regarding concerts & operettas at Globe Trotters who also intend to visit our northern border.

Mrs. Schwartz has been a resident of Pittsburgh for 30 years but is not a naturalized citizen.

PIRATES' HOME SCHEDULE REDUCED TO SEVEN GAMES

James J. Long's Sports Comment

Walter Johnson

Ball in Shorter Flight

WHEN DELIVERED BY Rowe, the ball travels from two to three feet less in its flight through the air to the plate than when thrown by another pitcher. Schoolboy gains that distance by his long forward stride and his long arms. His fast ball, like Johnson's, of yesteryear, is on top of the batter before the latter realizes it.

Johnson was strictly a fast ball pitcher who threw the pellet past the batters, inning after inning. Rowe is a versatile moundsman who combines a fast ball with a good curve and what is said to be the best change of pace in the game today. He is instinctively a good pitcher; a natural; he automatically does the right thing.

Bad Break Halts Grove

Prior to Rowe's try for a new American League pitching record of 17 straight wins, Lefty Grove came nearer than any other hurler in that circuit to beating 16. An unlucky break in the form of a misjudged fly snapped Grove's streak of 16 in a row in 1931, causing him to lose a slab duel to Dick Coffman in St. Louis, 1 to 0.

Lefty Grove

With two out in the third inning, Fred Schulte singled for the Browns, and scored the only run of the game when Jim More, a recruit outfielder for the A's, misjudged Oscar Melillo's fly and allowed it to go for a double. It is related that after the game Grove broke about everything in the clubhouse.

Layden Cures Laggards

NOTRE DAME PLAYERS hardly will cut any football classes this fall. They've learned about Elmer Layden. When the spring drills started, four Irish gridders who considered themselves established on the squad reported 20 minutes late. Layden said nothing. Next day the quartet repeated the late arrival.

At the conclusion of the session, Elmer dismissed all of the candidates except the tardy four. "Now, boys," he said in his sweetest way, "suppose you go out and jog around that track and keep it up for 20 minutes." Thereafter the four, with some new ideas, were the first to report daily.

Famous Boat Recalled

RECENT MENTION OF the historic four-oared rowing shell Dunstan-on-Tyne led John T. Taylor, local amateur athletic leader, to recall the early years of the famous boat. It was built in England in 1870, and the late James G. Taylor, father of John, headed a crew including also James Renforth, Thomas Winship and Jack Martin, that rowed it to the four-oared professional championship of the world in an international race at Lachine, Canada.

John T. Taylor

Before the oarsmen returned to England all the boats were sold, the Dunstan-on-Tyne being bought in by Robert Liddell, a former Mayor of Pittsburgh. Later the Ward brothers acquired the shell. The rudder was in John T. Taylor's possession until a few years ago, when he presented it, with a book on early sculling, to the Penn A. C., of Philadelphia. Officials of the city of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, England, have long considered bringing the boat back to the River Tyne and placing it in an institute as an inspiration to the younger generation to regain world rowing supremacy.

Yankee-Rainbow Race Postponed

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 29.—(INS.)—The Yankee-Rainbow yacht race scheduled for today was postponed to give Yankee ample time to fit a double jumper strut in place of the single jumper strut which snapped yesterday.

SHAMROCKS GET NEW NAME

By PHIL GRABOWSKI
Softball Tournament Secretary

The Campbell Shamrocks, crowned senior champions of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's first annual Western Pennsylvania amateur softball tournament, concluded on Monday, will represent the district in the national tournament in Chicago on September 8, 9 and 10 as the East Liberty Shamrocks. The change in the name was made because all members of the team hail from that section.

In an effort to keep in first-class condition until they invade Chicago, the management has arranged a few practice games, the first of which will be played at Peabody High School field tomorrow night when the Elizabeth Produce team is met.

Confidence in the Shamrocks' ranks prior to the final game was not lacking. Harry Langford, star shortfielder, was so certain of victory that he wrote his football coach at Franklin and Marshall College a week ago that he would be unable to report for the first football practice.

Softball Slants.

Bob Adams, manager of the C. J. Wanis of the North Side who made a fine showing in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph tournament, claims to have the only softball team on the North Side. Since his team was eliminated in the tourney, Bob has been arranging practice games with leading teams.

The Fort Black Community Club, of Greenfield, is open for softball games with first-class teams using the 12-inch ball. Call Freddie Crum at Jackson 1015.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE AGED HIKER—Many years ago Ed Hartley, of Berkeley, Cal., started hiking from Berkeley to Redwood Peak and return, and in 1907 set up a record of seven hours for the trip, covering 24 miles of difficult trail. Each year since then he has bettered his own record, until last year, at the age of 76, he made the jaunt in five hours and 35 minutes. The hike was made under the auspices of the Acme Athletic Club, whose members have been enthusiastic rooters of Old Man Hartley every years. THE TRICK FALLS—To the uninitiated, the Trick Falls of Glacier Park are indeed tricky, because half of the year the falls don't even go over the falls. Underneath the rock precipice is a subterranean outlet for the waters of the river above, and during the dry season this underground passage accommodates the entire flow of the river and no water goes over the falls. However, during the season of rains and snow the cascade is a marvelous spectacle, when the falls become so tremendous that the underground river is entirely hidden.

PIRATES HOLD SCRIMMAGE

By JESS CARVER
Staff Correspondent.

MT. PLEASANT, Pa., Aug. 29.—Rough work, with a capital "R," gets under way for the Pittsburgh Pirates, of the National Professional League, here today as the Rooney gridders put in their third day in training camp.

Coach Luby DiMeolo has ordered a scrimmage session for this afternoon. He's about set in his mind an a tentative first-string lineup and this afternoon will present Sortet and Smith at the ends; Quatse and Douds or Niccolai at the tackles; Greeney and Weinberg at the guards; Oehler at center and Johnny Blood, Warren Heller, George Kavel and Sil Zaninelli in the backfield.

Another halfback was added to the squad yesterday when little Harry Marker, former West Virginia star, joined up with the boys. Marker, light but fast, is a good passer.

President Rooney received a wire yesterday from Tommy Whalen, former Catholic University halfback, informing him that due to an infection of the eyes, he'll be unable to report for a week or 10 days.

Three doubleheaders and a single contest, seven games in all, make up all that remains of Forbes Field baseball for the present campaign after the dual bill of today is completed.

The light September card of the Pirates is due to the fact that the Traynor Clan will spend most of the month on its last eastern tour. The final Seaboard invasion will open in Boston one week from today.

The Oakland Orchard will be quiet from today until next Monday, which is Labor Day. On Labor Day afternoon the Buccos, aided by the Cardinals, will stage an innovation in the way of a doubleheader. It will be the first time the home club has departed from the traditional morning and afternoon games on a holiday.

The Bucs will entertain the fans of Punxsutawney tomorrow in an exhibition tilt, the proceeds of which will go to an American Legion post of that city. Friday is entirely open on the Pirate card, and the game with Cincinnati scheduled for Saturday at that place has been moved back to Sunday, when it will help to make up a doubleheader.

PLAY IN ZANESVILLE

The Bucs are down on the books for a night game Saturday night, the big leaguers to meet the Zanesville club of the Mid-Atlantic League at Zanesville.

Of the five games to be staged at Forbes Field after the Pirates return from the East, two will find the Reds here, the Cubs to help ring down the curtain in the last series of the home season.

A dual encounter with the Reds is on the docket for Friday, September 21. The following day the Cubs will be the attraction in a doubleheader, and the curtain will fall on the succeeding Sunday with the Pirates and Bruins showing in a single game.

The Braves defeated the Pirates, 5 to 3, in the only game played at Forbes Field yesterday. A heavy shower arriving soon after the early game was completed caused the cancellation of the second contest, which was moved back to today.

GRIMES BATTED HARD

Burleigh Grimes couldn't get the Tribe out in the first inning, four of them nicking him for hits before Bill Swift went to the rescue. The Braves profited by their three-run lead of the first inning and picked up a couple of tallies as the battle proceeded.

Eddie Brandt blanked the Pirates for six rounds, but he was close to disaster in the seventh when the home batters bunched five hits and scored three times. Brandt was able to get Lindstrom out for the final putout of the inning with two runners on the sacks.

ORIOLES LOOK OVER BIRCH

Paul Birch, local sandlot star and basketball ace of Duquesne University, is in Baltimore working out with the Orioles, of which club Dick Goldberg also is a member. Birch will captain the Dukes on the floor this winter, and therefore it not signing any baseball contracts at this time.

The Monessen Club has withdrawn from the Greater Pittsburgh Baseball Commission tournament rather than play the Mayview team in its next game and the latter team has been moved up in the competition.

The Hazelwood Verhovays play the Scott Morgans at Homewood and the Ottie Cochrans meet the Paul Jones Club at Beaver in fifth round games in the series this evening.

Other feature sandlot games this evening are: Books at Mt. Oliver and the Lincoln Civics vs. the Crafton-Ingram Church League All-Stars at Crafton.

WOLFE HELD EVEN

Football's Complete History Gathered By All-America Christy Walsh

Volume Contains Records Since Season of '69

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

America's biggest all-American star is all-American scout. He's Christy Walsh, prime of sports syndicate men, the man who has perpetuated the all-America idea in football with his All-America Board of Football, and for nine years now has been sponsoring the annual Babe Ruth All-America Baseball Team, which will make its annual appearance soon.

Christy Walsh

Christy always is all-American in the searching of other. His latest is a big volume called "Intercollegiate Football," just off the press. It is a complete history of the sport since its inception in 1869, containing all-time records of 135 colleges, in 478 large pages, with 446 illustrations. It is a mammoth undertaking, digging into the archives of the sport to a most thorough manner and bringing to life again the scores of 58,000 games and naming some 23,000 letter men.

YALE LEADS IN STARS

It reveals the fact that Yale hasn't had an all-America player since 1920, yet has more all-America players to its credit than any other college or university, 66.

Players tell of their greatest thrills, the colleges present the history of their coaches, as well as players, and Notre Dame's data spans 14 pages.

Bill Corum Writes:

By BILL CORUM.
(Writer for International News Service.)

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 29.—We popped over here last evening to watch Lynwood Thomas (Schoolboy) Rowe do a simple problem in mathematics at Shibe Park this afternoon. All the Schoolboy has to do is add 1 to 16 and he will have arrived at a new pitching record for successive pitching victories in the American League. It sounds simple enough, but we shall have more to say about it after the bright young man of the Detroit Tigers holds up his slate with the right answer on it.

Schoolboy Rowe

In the meantime let us go down to the sea, the sad sea, in a lifeboat and consider the Henley of the sure-enough seamen that is to be rowed on the Hudson River on Labor Day. This seems to be one of those rugged, he-man sporting events that goes on holding itself every year without benefit of the sports pages or sports scribblers.

Your present correspondent, at least, would never have known that such a boat race was in the offing if one of the eight-oared crews that is to take part hadn't been training at Gus Wilson's Health and Nightclub farm along with Shamus McLarnin, that hat broth of a bye from Vancouver, B. C.

Thought It Gag

When first we were told that there was an eight-oared crew training at Wilson's, we thought it must be a gag of some kind, as there is more draft beer around Orangeburg, N. Y., than water. But it seems that the Hudson lies over the hills not far away and that for the past month this crew of the S. S. Excalibur has been yanking a 5,500-pound lifeboat up and down its bosom in strict preparation for the regatta day of the oil tankers, fruitboats and freighters.

It also seems that at least nine crews and possibly as many as 14 will row the two nautical miles to a finish line under the George Washington Bridge on September 3, with the United States, England, Germany, Sweden, Holland, Italy and Denmark represented in the entries.

This gives a pronounced international aspect to the affair, and I am told that not at Poughkeepsie, Derby, the Henley, or elsewhere is rowing rivalry more keen than it is among these horny-fisted sailors to whom an oar is a part of the day's work and not a college souvenir.

Until a couple of seasons back the Swedes and the Danes used to pin the ears of the English-speaking crews back with persistent regularity. But along about that time the Standard Oil Company interested itself in the race and sent out a boat stroked by a former Columbia oarsman, or so my informant said, that wound up last spring winning the old cup permanently.

Row for Trophy

So this year they are rowing for a new trophy, called the Haugh Cup and presented by the winning Standard Oil tanker. Gold and silver medals also go to the oarsmen of the first two crews to finish, and an individual cash reward from the winning company also seems to be customary, though not compulsory.

Assuming that his crew wins the race, however, and that his employers do something pretty generous about it afterward, no member of one of these crews can hope to get even a small per cent of what an ordinary prizefighter earns for an ordinary fight.

Something like this must have been in Mons. Wilson's mind when he came to tell me in horrified tones of the rigorous training through which the crew at his place was going.

Roxian Bowlers Win Lid-Lifter

SHOWING PUTS AMERICANS AT TOP OF HEAP

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Fifteen American marks, including Bill Bonthron's 3:48.8 for 1,500 meters and Glenn Cunningham's 4:06.7 for the mile are among the track and field records accepted by the Congress of the International Amateur Athletic Federation as world standards. The other American records given world recognition:

120-meter high hurdles—Percy Beard, 14.4 seconds.
400-meter hurdles—Glen Hardin, 50.6 seconds.
220-yard low hurdles—Norman Paul, 23 seconds (Ohio).
120 meters—Ralph Metcalfe, 13.5 seconds (tied).
200 meters—Ralph Metcalfe, 20.6 seconds (tied).
800 meters—Ben Eastman, 1:48.4.
440 yards—Ben Eastman, 46.4 seconds.
400 yards—Ben Eastman, 47.02 seconds.
880 yards—Ben Eastman, 1:49.8.
Mile—Glenn Cunningham, 4:06.7.
3,000 meters—Bill Bonthron, 8:48.8.
Broad jump—Jack Torrance, 25.58 meters (84 feet 1 11-64 inches).

All but three of the marks—those credited to Paul in the hurdles and Metcalfe in the sprints—displace present records. Those three merely tied standards already accepted.

It was the finest American showing in years and definitely returns the United States to the top of the track and field heap, not only in number of world records held, but in the quality of performance.

Most astounding of the new records is the shot-put mark of Torrance, Louisiana State University giant. His record performance eclipses by 4 feet 5 11-32 inches the old standard of 52 feet 7⅞ inches set by Z. Heljasz, of Poland, in 1932.

Bonthron's performance supplants the 3:49.2 mark of Jules Ladoumegue, France's now ineligible middle distance star, while Cunningham's record of 4:06.7 for the mile takes the place of Ladoumegue's old mark of 4:09.2, made in 1931.

The 3:49 effort of Luigi Beccali, Italy's Olympic champion at 1,500 meters, and Jack Lovelock's record of 4:07.6 for the mile had not been presented for recognition. Other records accepted by the congress are:

100 yards—Luigi Beccali, Italy, 9:10.
Four miles—Volmar Iso Holio, Finland, 19:01.
3,000 meters—Henry Nielsen, Denmark, 8:18.4.
Two hours — Ernest Harper, England, 33,653 meters.
Javelin—Matti Jarvinen, Finland, 76.16 meters (249 feet 8 3-16 inches).

NURMI PLEA REFUSED

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 29.—The International Amateur Athletic Federation Congress yesterday decisively voted down a proposition that would have permitted Paavo Nurmi, Finnish runner, to be restored to good standing. This action, while it does not bar Nurmi from competing in Finland, where he was cleared of professionalism, it ruins his chances of competing in the Olympics.

Famous Superior A. A. In Reunion Tomorrow

Perhaps some day Manager Traynor will find it feasible to switch Arky Vaughan from his present shortstop role to another infield position, or maybe an outfield post . . . If such a move should come to pass, Arky should not feel downcast, for he would be following the footsteps of some of the great players of the game.

Rogers Hornsby came to the Cardinals 20 years ago and was thrown into the difficult shortstop role . . . The young Rajah flopped all over the works and was moved to third base . . . There were days when Hornsby looked impressive at third, but eventually he was tried at second and in the outfield . . . His outfield antics had nothing to remind fans of a brother Texan named Tris Speaker, but Hornsby did develop into quite a keystone tender.

Frank Frisch is one of the greatest second base men in the game and he played third base for the Giants over a long period, the Fordham Flash being about equally strong at each spot . . . But when he was assigned to the shortfield role, he squawked . . . Frisch had to play in Dave Bancroft's place in a tough series in Pittsburgh . . . I encountered him after a game and he remarked:

"They can have that shortfield job . . . I hope Bancroft is back there tomorrow."

Many players think Vaughan would be a crackerjack in the outfield, owing to his speed, his strong throwing arm and his sure hands . . . The timing necessary for the Wagnerian role is the element that stumps a lot of stars of other positions when they attempt to play shortstop . . . Honus had a judgment of time that spelled synchronism on the diamond . . .

Vaughan's bat and speed are of such vital import in the play of the Pirates that he just has to be a part of the lineup, and for one who was pushed into his present task almost direct from the sandlots he turns in a good fielding job. — CHARLES J. DOYLE.

GIANTS, TIGERS NOT CHECKED

Associated Press.

The results of the Western tour of the New York Giants and the Eastern jaunt of the Detroit Tigers, could be marked up as successful today regardless of the outcomes of the final contests of the trips.

Each team had four and one-half game lead when it took the road and hoped for little more than to hold it until the final home stand after Labor Day. Today the Giants, after turning back the Chicago threat, 3 to 1, yesterday, were five and one-half games in the van.

Detroit, rained out at Philadelphia, still had its four and one-half game margin going into the closing doubleheader in the East, one game of which was to provide the opportunity for Schoolboy Rowe to attempt to break the American League record for consecutive pitching victories.

The triumph of the Giants and Leroy Parmelee gave Bill Terry's club a record of nine victories against six defeats, while Detroit has already won 10 games and lost only five in the East.

Parmelee, carrying the Giants to their first triumph over Chicago in three games, not only held the edge in a mound duel with big Jim Weaver, but put his club ahead in the fifth inning with a home run.

The defeat left the Cubs only one game ahead of the third-place Cardinals, who defeated Brooklyn 2 to 0, despite Ray Benge's four-hit hurling. The four hits came in succession in the sixth to produce the only runs.

The last-place Cincinnati Reds ran their winning streak to four games, their longest of the season, by taking their second straight doubleheader from the Phillies, 8 to 6 and 2 to 1.

With the Yankees and White Sox rained out, as well as the Tigers and A's, developments in the American League were confined to the Browns' 4-to-0 triumph over Washington, which left the clubs tied for fifth place, and Boston's 8-to-2 decision over Cleveland, leaving them all square in their third-place struggle.

ATHLETIC CLUB IN REUNION

A famous old local athletic club—the Superior Park A. A., of the North Side—will hold a reunion of its athletes at Valley Refuge, Riverview Park, tomorrow, when the feats of more than a score of years ago will be relived. The affair will be in the form of a basket picnic.

The Superior football team was organized in 1901 by a group of boys ranging from 16 to 18 years in age, and when it was abandoned in 1912 some of the original members still were active in its behalf. In its 12 seasons in football, the club scored 105 victories against 12 defeats and eight ties, and scored 1944 points against 213 by its opponents.

Hundreds of followers of the old teams are expected to join in the reunion.

Honus Says:

By HONUS WAGNER
Former Star, Now Coach of Pirates.

To the Sports Editor:

A policeman says to me the other day: "Honus, I wish you would tell parents not to say to their children: 'If you're not good I'll call a policeman.' That makes the kids look at policemen like they were unpopular. Parents should say: 'Always remember that a policeman is your friend,' and in that way the child will grow up with a feeling of friendliness for cops and respect for law and order." Now that was a long speech for a cop, but I think it is good sense. So I'm passing it along to your readers who happen to be fathers and mothers.

STATE LEAGUE STARS CHOSEN

The Pennsylvania State Association's first annual all-star team, selected by the baseball writers in the association cities, is a representative aggregation, with every club in the circuit placing at least one man in the lineup. Greensburg and Jeannette led with three places each, Charleroi and Monessen getting two apiece and McKeesport and Washington split the remaining two.

Lee, of Charleroi, southpaw pitcher, was the only unanimous selection, but J. Dudick, of Washington; Huffman, of Monessen, and Bolton, of Jeannette, missed only one first-place vote.

Players drawing one or more votes, but failing to place on the team, are given honorable mention. The team:

America's Cup History

The First Defense

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Twenty years passed before the New York Yacht Club received a challenge for the America's Cup after an American syndicate's schooner, The America, lifted the trophy in a fleet race in British waters in 1851.

The challenge was posted by James Ashbury, a British sportsman, who proposed to sail his 180-ton Cambria in quest of the cup. Negotiations between Ashbury and the New York Yacht Club, which was in possession of the trophy, reached a stalemate several times due to the Briton's dissastisfaction with the conditions for the race.

But Ashbury had great faith in the powers of the Cambria and consequently he crossed the Atlantic to match his schooner with the best boat America could produce. When he found his arguments for a match race were unavailing, he finally agreed to race Cambria against 17 American boats, including the old America, in a race sponsored by the N. Y. Y. C.

Ashbury protested vigorously against the allowance of centerboard yachts in the race, but the New York Yacht Club would not admit its power to bar any vessel eligible to sail in the ordinary races of the club.

In a fine sailing breeze, the first challenge race took place on August 8, 1870, over the N. Y. Y. C. course, starting off Stapleton, Staten Island, to Southwest Spit Buoy, thence to and around Sandy Hook Lightship and return, approximately 38 nautical miles.

Magic, a center-board vessel of a little under 80 feet water line, took the lead at the start and sailed the distance in 3 hours, 58 minutes, 21 seconds corrected time. Cambria did not make a brilliant start, and she lost her fore-topmast during the race and finished eighth.

Bohn Calls Block Of 6% Debentures

DETROIT, Aug. 29. — Bohn Aluminum and Brass Corporation is calling $500,000 of its 6 per cent debentures for November 1 next. This is in addition to $411,000 called for September 1. The company will then have outstanding $5[illegible],000 of an original issue of $2,135,000 put out in July, 1928, to finance the acquisition of the Michigan Smelting Company.

STOCKS RISE IN QUIET MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Some of the gloom was wiped off market sentiment today and the price structure showed signs of a much firmer undertone.

Secretary Morgenthau's explanation of the country's financial condition appeared to be helpful, although there was some adjustment as to his estimates of the cost of the New Deal. Stocks, while still relatively quiet, responded to selective buying. The alcohol, farm and packing issues gave the best performance, some of the latter getting into new high territory for the year.

GRAINS RALLY

Grains rallied a cent or more a bushel without any special buoyancy. Cotton again moved higher. Scattered improvement came into the bond list. Moderate recoveries were registered by the majority of United States government securities, but several German loans sank to new record lows. With the exception of sterling, which dropped sharply in terms of the dollar, foreign exchanges were generally higher.

Shares of both Armour of Illinois preferreds, Cudahy and California Packing got up a point or more each to new 1934 peaks. Similar gains were recorded by Snider Packing, Wilson, Chickasha Cotton Oil, Case, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, United States Industrial Alcohol, National Distillers, Allied Chemical, Liggett and Myers B, Columbia Pictures and Allied Chemical. Most of the metals were a bit better, although Homestake changed hands for the first time in several days at a decline of 4½ points. Santa Fe, Union Pacific, New York Central, General Motors, Chrysler, American Telephone, United States Steel, Goodyear, Loew's and many others were up fractionally.

PACKERS RISE

The packing group seemingly reflected higher food prices and expectations that advances may help the companies that have large low-cost inventories. Hogs at Chicago reached a new three-year top above the $8 mark. Predictions of better business for the distillers, together with the move to cut liquor taxes in the campaign to eliminate the bootlegger, brought renewed interest in the alcohol stocks, most of which have been in the doldrums for some time.

While banking circles were inclined to regard the Treasury Secretary's financial address as reassuring, inflationary proponents were not especially cheered by the official pronouncement that the government's $2,800,000,000 "profit" from dollar devaluation would be kept "under lock and key" for the time being.

There was no surprise to market observers in the statements that it was expected the gold "profit" would ultimately be used to reduce the national debt. It was pointed out in some quarters that the long-term inflationary effect of the use of the "profit" would depend largely upon the way the debt retirement is brought about.

Most bankers felt that the Morgenthau speech was especially timely in view of the fact that the Treasury has financing operations involving more than $1,700,000,000 during the next several weeks and the firmness of government bonds in this period is considered highly important.

The financial community continued to study business barometers with the hope of discovering encouraging indications of at least a seasonal fall upturn. At the same time the labor situation was giving serious concern to industrial leaders.

WHEAT MOVES UPWARD

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—Grain prices showed an upward trend early today on scattered buying in sympathy with strength at Liverpool.

A report that wheat in Northwestern Saskatchewan had been seriously damaged by frost was considered bullish.

Opening ⅛ to ⅝ up, December new 1.03¼-1.03⅜, wheat later rose further. Corn started at ⅜ to ⅞ advance, December 80-80¼, and subsequently gained additional strength.

Increased Trading Volume on Upturns Stirs Hopes Of Traders Favoring Bull Side

Rallying tendencies in stocks today again brought a somewhat larger volume of trade in contrast with extreme dullness on recent recessions. The fact that turnover fell to around 400,000 shares on yesterday's down drift strengthened faith of theorists who believe the market is set upon discounting a moderate upturn in business this fall. What little speculative activity there has been in stocks this month has been flowing mainly toward the bull side for activity has increased on advances and dried up on recessions. Most market commentators are not singing any loud bullish peans yet, however, preferring to wait and see how trends shape up after Labor Day.

Secretary Morgenthau's accounting of the New Deal costs and his expectation that the $2,800,000,000 profit from dollar devaluation ultimately would be used in balancing the budget impressed some Wall Street observers as another effort to bolster confidence of business and capital for fall business and Treasury financing. It was noted how closely his address followed the report on NRA accomplishments by Donald Richberg and a series of utterances by Secretary Roper and other administration figures apparently designed to be reassuring.

The new effect of developments in Washington since President Roosevelt returned from his Pacific trip is to spread the impression in the financial community that the administration is on "a tack to the right." Wall street has had assurances that its policies were not meant to eliminate the profit motive in American business life. Secretary Morgenthau emphatically denied rumors that the gold value of the dollar was to be reduced again, and the Cuban trade agreement was announced. The chairman of the RFC, Jesse H. Jones, reported signs of loosening of bank credit. Wall street would not be surprised to see more talks and moves along the line of Secretary Morgenthau's address and the Cuban trade treaty to bolster business confidence over the next few months.

Secretary Morgenthau's accounting of the New Deal costs seemed to have had a generally reassuring effect, judging by available comments in the financial district. Expense of the New Deal has been one of the main points emphasized by its critics in Wall street. But there were skeptical voices. Dr. Lionel D. Edie, Wall street economist, expressed the belief few people would be convinced the "New Deal is practically a free ride," although he described Morgenthau's address as reassuring for the time being. He called the estimate that the new idea to date had cost only a half billion dollars "ingenious arithmetic. Fears of increased government debt and taxes still haunt the country, he declared.

The reassuring aspects of the bill for the New Deal, as presented by Secretary Morgenthau, did not find pronounced reflection in the government bond market but bond traders reported there was "a better feeling around the market" as result of it. Bond men expressed the opinion the government would not encounter difficulties in carrying out the $1,700,000,000 in refunding operations facing it. A successful refunding operation by the government, it was pointed out, should have a favorable effect upon the investment market generally, and upon business sentiment.

The final paragraphs of Secretary Morgenthau's address reminded the financial community that the administration had spent about three billion dollars less than had been forecast originally. He explained that whether these three billions actually would be spent over the next year "will depend upon developments which cannot be foreseen at this time." Thus, whatever deflationary effect using the gold profit for paying federal debt might have eventually, the possibility of further piling up of excess bank reserves and demand deposits over the next few months from government spending was recognized. Financial observers do not expect any early drying up of the stream of money poured through government channels to expand mass purchasing power and credit.

SEC May Order Uniform Accounting Practices

By GEORGE H. SNYDER
Business Editor

UNIFORM PRACTICES in accounting may be one of the reforms to result from the Securities Exchange act. Such a reform would be of inestimable benefit to the general public. It would make annual and quarterly reports more truely significant—a better mirror of the real results of corporations — and it would make the statements of various companies in the same industries more amenable of comparison.

Mr. Snyder

The new law does not prescribe standards of accounting practice but it gives the Securities and Exchange Commission the power to prescribe the forms in which reports are to be made, the methods to be followed in the preparation of reports, in the appraisal of assets, in the determination of depreciation and depletion and in establishing other charges.

Commission May Act In Future

THE COMMISSION has such a great range to cover in its duties, particularly in the next few years, that no action may be taken on the details of corporate accounting for some time, but it seems quite certain that consideration will be given to this important subject eventually.

Naturally, action on this subject will involve so many technical points that much time will be needed before definite rulings can be made. In addition, the commission has so many regulations to establish and so many reports to make on various phases of the securities business that it cannot get around to all parts of its task for several years.

Will Make Reports Mean What They Say

STANDARDIZATION of accounting methods is a crying need from the standpoint of investors. Two corporations may be engaged in the same industry. Similar circumstances may surround their operations. One may report a profit and the other a loss. This may mean that one corporation is more efficiently managed than the other or it may mean that one corporation is charging off a heavy depreciation on its assets and the other a low depreciation. The investor has no way to judge which is the case when uniform accounting practices are not followed.

Depreciation is only one item through which profits or losses may be distorted. The fact that independent audits are made of reports does not entirely eliminate these uncertainties in accounting. There is room for much honest disagreement on how various intangible charges should be computed.

Standardization cannot make it possible for a corporation to do more than guess at the length of the life of a particular piece of equipment, but it can set up general policies which would result in more close conformity in methods used by corporations in setting up these uncertain reserves.

Forbes

Must Consider Costs. Where Are We Going? Railroad Regulation.

By B. C. FORBES

Mr. Forbes

MAYBE YOU have been more fortunate, but all through life I have had to take into consideration the cost of doing things I wanted to do. All business concerns, too, have to take costs into account.

But for venturing the thought that our government should ponder the bill it is running up and ask itself where the money is to come from, I have drawn upon my head a fusillade of criticism and vituperation.

Many people who have not thought things through seem to have the notion that it doesn't matter a button how much the government spends, that it is treason to bring up the subject of finding the funds to liquidate billion-dollar expenditures of a magnitude never before incurred by any government in peace-times.

Apparently the delusion is widespread that a government has a bottomless purse, that it can pull limitless amounts of cash out of a hat after the manner of magicians that a day of reckoning will never come.

The truth is, of course, that governments are not creators of wealth but are spenders, that every penny of their income must be supplied by you and me, the taxpayers.

It is time the people of this country frankly recognized these simple facts. It is time they gave serious thought to how the staggering bill now being so lightly swollen will ultimately be paid. It is time that every citizen realized that the government cannot forever act the role of Santa Claus, distributing largesse on a dazzling scale, that the government cannot permanently support millions, pay huge bounties to farmers for crops raised and for destroying crops or animals already raised, without presenting the bill by and by to you and me for settlement.

In other words, the government should begin, and all of us should insist that it begin, to figure how much farther it can afford to go in lading out billions, how much more you and I can afford to hand over to tax collectors.

Surely, not even the most ardent New Dealer is indifferent as to whether the United States government becomes bankrupt or not.

It is in the ultimate interest of all of us, including those who fondly hope that the government will hereafter take care of them financially, that the solvency and the credit of the nation be scrupulously protected and maintained. No matter how humane a scheme may be, it must be financed—or collapse.

Is the New Deal steering America towards national solvency?

RAILROAD REGULATION, despite all its far-reaching advantages, has not brought about sound, healthy financial railway systems. Rates have been whittled down simultaneously with crippling increases in costs, some of them thoroughly unsound from a broad, economic point of view.

Train length limits.

Ordered unnecessary and expensive union stations.

Urged increase of railroad wages and employment when railroads were as a whole barely earning fixed charges.

P.R.R. LOADINGS OFF FOR WEEK

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 29.—During the week ended August 25 the Pennsylvania Railroad system handled a total of 80,140 revenue cars, as compared with 81,553 in the week preceding and 95,511 in the like 1933 week.

For the period January 1 to August 25, loadings total 2,986,158 cars, as against 2,815,411 in the similar period of 1933, an increase of 6-1 per cent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—During week ended August 25 the New York Central System handled 88,255 revenue cars, as against 87,757 in the week preceding and 102,249 in the corresponding period in 1933.

BANKS 'LOADED' WITH FUNDS TO BUY

Following is the last of a series of three articles explaining the nearly two billion dollars of impending government refunancing which is a dominant factor in banking, the investment markets and business.

By M. J. RAMSAY
Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—Tens of thousand of individual bank depositors and corporations have placed in the keeping of the powerful New York City banks which are members of the Federal Reserve System nearly 7,600 million dollars.

Part of this money is loaned by the banks to business, a larger part is invested in securities. And nearly two-thirds of these investment securities, or 2,863 million dollars worth, are government issues, representing a claim upon Uncle Sam's credit.

Over the country the condition is much the same. The more than 14,000 commercial banks, national and state, are estimated to hold, as investments or as security for loans, from 50 to 60 per cent of the securities evidencing the public debt. This debt has mounted to a new peak above 27,000 million dollars and grows rapidly as the government finances relief and recovery.

U. S. CREDIT VITAL

The extraordinary dependence of the banks upon general government credit, and the bitter controversy over the wisdom of piling up more debt, highten the importance of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's impending plans to borrow nearly 2,000 million dollars to pay off old loans, and possibly to borrow new money as well.

Upon the government's continuing ability to borrow readily at reasonable rates, as well as to repay promptly what it borrows, rests in large part the ability of the banks to pay their million of depositors, to say nothing of making loans to business.

The 12 Federal Reserve banks which link together and stand behind the 6,300 member banks of the system, themselves hold nearly 2,500 million dollars of the government's securities. Invested in these securities, too, are nearly all the assets of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, which guarantees over 12,000 million dollars of deposits in more than 14,000 banks.

INSTITUTIONS BUYERS

Insurance companies with millions of policy holders have government security investments running to hundreds of millions of dollars, so have the great corporations of the country.

As the government borrows it becomes a big depositor in the banks. It reloans vast sums, through super-banks as the RFC and the agencies of the Farm Credit Administration. Its spending affects the production and marketing of goods and their prices.

All these things, and the government's only partly disclosed financing and currency policies make it certain that when Morgenthau tells shortly how much he will borrow and what he will pay he will not have to adjure the financial and business world to give ear.

SEC RULES ON UNLISTED STOCKS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—The Securities Commission today announced rules requiring exchanges wishing to continue unlisted trading to make applications with the commission.

Unlisted trading is the trading in securities which have not been formally listed by an exchange and therefore usually have given little information about themselves. The commission ruled, however, that quotations of transactions in unlisted securities must clearly indicate the difference between such transactions and transactions in fully listed securities.

Such unlisted securities, however, will be exempt from reporting requirements of the exchange act.

Applicants for temporary continuance of unlisted privileges must file with the commission not earlier than September 16 an application which conforms with requirements prescribed for registration statements in listed securities.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(INS.)—Marginal requirements for transactions on the stock exchanges will be fixed by the Federal Reserve Board shortly before October 1.

This situation was being given study by the board's experts as well as private authorities today but it was regarded as unlikely that any decision would be reached before the last week in September.

Under the law there may be a range of from 25 to 45 per cent in the marginal requirement although the board is not required to adhere strictly to this limitation.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—The Securities and Exchange Commission lost an argument today with Comptroller General J. R. McCard as McCarl ruled that employes of the commission must come under civil service.

The commission had contended it had power to hire experts without regard to civil service, but McCarl found that this would apply only in exceptional instances.

Chairman Kennedy was asked at a press conference if this meant the commission had lost. He answered, with a quick smile:

"Yes, we lost."

CURRENT STEEL PROSPECTS VAGUE

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Iron Age says:

"Large naval awards and heavy structural steel and reinforcing bar lettin have improved the long-term outlook for steel, but the current situation remains discouraging. An increase in number of sm. l. orders is reported from several important producing districts, but volume remains light. In most cases releases are not sufficient to sustain production at present levels and mill schedules this week and next will be at the lowest point since March, 1933.

"Steel ingot production this week has declined two points to 19 per cent of capacity, the lowest rate since March, 1933, when activity dropped under 16 per cent. This week's drop is partially attributable to the completion of orders for railroad materials, shipment of which must be made by August 31 because of code regulations. With no improvement in specifications discernible, Labor Day week will likely show further curtailment.

NAVY ORDERS EXPECTED

"The 24 vessels awarded by the Navy Department will require more than 40,000 tons of steel, the rolling of which may be extended over more than a year. Orders for the required material will be placed in the early fall. The placing of these vessels will still leave 54 ships which must be constructed to bring the Navy up to the strength authorized by the London naval treaty, assuring a steady demand from this source for at least three years.

"The benefits of the federal home building and rehabilitation program will not be experienced in the steel industry before spring and then only in a mild way. Private industry is not yet beginning to avail itself of the opportunity to secure federal funds for plant rehabilitation.

SCRAP PRICES WEAKEN

"The finished steel market still lacks support from the automobile industry. The reciprocal trade agreement with Cuba promises at least a partial restoration of one of our most important export markets for iron and steel as well as some forms of machinery.

"Scrap prices have developed further weakness with the Iron Age composite price 25 cents lower to $9.92 a ton, the lowest level since last November. Current prices for both pig iron and steel have been reaffirmed for the fourth quarter amid the Iron Age composite prices are unchanged at $17.90 a ton for iron and 2.124 cents a pound for finished steel."

Hog Prices Reach $8 in Chicago Market

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—(INS.)—Continued weight, off offerings sent hog prices upstream 10 to 15 cents higher today. Tops reached $8, the highest in three years. Receipts were 16,000, including 3,000 for the big packers.

Good to choice steers sold steady to strong while the lower grades showed a weaker tendency. Cows and heifers were almost steady.

COAL PRICE CUT 'UNLIKELY'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—The National Coal Association reported today that coal production this year through August 18 was 227,963,000 tons, against 195,062,000 tons during the similar period in 1933.

The gain over last year was held decisive a sharp decline in demand during the last six weeks which led the association to issue a warning that the coal-buying public purchase its winter fuel now to avoid possible inconvenience in the early winter from delayed delivery brought about by "backed-up demand."

Attention was directed to the fact that under the code prices now were largely stabilized and these was "no likelihood" of lower prices during the remainder of the season.

REFINERY 'GAS' STOCKS CUT

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States decreased 54,000 barrels in the week ended August 25, totaling 2,464,100 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicates. Daily average production east of California decreased 41,450 barrels to 1,969,700 barrels.

Refineries representing 89.7 per cent of estimated total capacity, operated at 73.3 per cent of their capacity, reported daily average runs of crude oil to stills as 2,474,000 barrels. Daily average the previous week for refineries representing 89.7 per cent of total, operated at 71.8 per cent of capacity, was 2,422,000 barrels.

Unfinished gasoline stocks totaled 6,044,000 barrels against 5,921,000 barrels.

Daily average cracked gasoline by refineries representing 95.6 per cent of total charging capacity was 475,000 barrels. Daily average the previous week by refineries representing 95.6 per cent of total was 492,000 barrels.

Imports of crude and refined oils at principal United States ports totaled 1,004,000 barrels, a daily average of 143,429 barrels, against 436,000 barrels, a daily average of 62,286 barrels for the previous week.

Missouri Pacific Carloadings Gain

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 29.—Loadings and receipts from connections on the Missouri Pacific system during the week ended August 25 totaled 21,818 cars, and compare with 21,647 in the week preceding and 20,766 in the corresponding 1933 period.

Foreign Exchange Trend Confuses Wall Street

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—Weakness of the pound sterling and strength of the gold currencies in terms of the dollar confused Wall street today.

It was clear that important financial circles here were inclined to agree with the interpretation in London that Secretary Morgenthau's remarks last night were anything but inflationary, despite the effort of some quarters in Paris to find inflationary implications in the Treasury Secretary's statement that it was proposed to use the profit for gold devaluation ultimately to reduce the public debt.

United States government bonds were a trifle higher. It was recalled that use of the profit from gold devaluation to reduce the public debt would be following in the footsteps of the French treasury, when the franc was devalued in 1928. That step was regarded in France then as of a distinctly "sound money" nature.

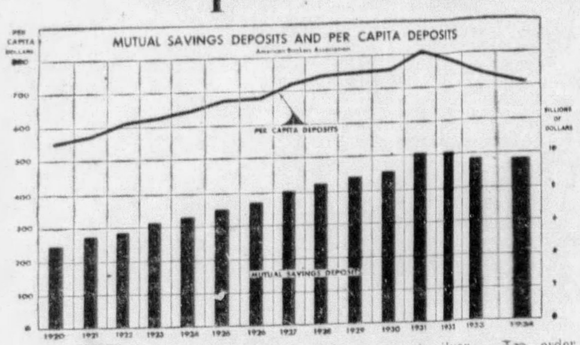
The pound dropped in terms of the dollar more than 2 centts to close to $5.04, and was even weaker against the French franc, yielding approximately 40 centimes in Paris to touch 75.40 francs, a record low by a wide margin.

One theory advanced in usually well-informed quarters in Wall street was that these curious movements reflected buying of French francs by the United States Treasury, to be converted into pounds with which to buy silver in the London market. The French franc rose moderately in terms of the dollar to about the outgoing gold point.

This theory was based on the thought that the Treasury was concerned with offering some support to the pound in relation to the gold currencies. Heretofore, the Treasury has bought pounds directly, and that appeared to react unfavorably on the pound in Paris.

It was suggested that bearishness on the dollar in Paris may have arisen from a report that the Treasury would retire its $525,000,000 of 1½ per cent certificates maturing on September 15 with cash, which would carry a possible implication of an unsatisfactory condition of the market for refunding. Well-informed quarters here, however, placed no credence in the report, and felt that the Treasury could easily finance the maturing cerdesired.

Per Capita Savings Deposits Trend Off



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE

This chart may be regarded as the thrift portrait of the American citizen. It shows the course of total deposits in our mutual savings banks from 1920 to 1934, and the amount per depositor. On June 30, 1934, there were 13,686,947 depositors who had $9,720,733,072 in our mutual savings banks.

In spite of the new thought regarding the responsibility of the government for the security and well-being of the individual in the future, there still remains a substantial part of the population which believes in relying upon its own efforts and its own foresight in providing for the future. To what extent this instinct for future provisions and self-protection will be impaired by the liberal distribution of government relief and by the threat of inflation is an open question.

However, the number of these depositors and the total amount which they have accumulated as a hostage against the future is a measure of the faith which they have that the government will not deliberately corrupt the standard of payment.

The action of the President in nationalizing silver has again raised the issue of inflation. It may be recalled that the Silver Purchase Act of 1934 requires a foundation for our currency consisting of three parts gold and one part silver. In order to accomplish this purpose, it is necessary for the Treasury to purchase vast quantities of silver. The minimum amount has been estimated at a billion ounces, and the maximum at two billion.

Naturally, any purchase of such quantities of the white metal will have a distinct effect upon the market value of silver. Since the government's action, based upon a presumptive social purpose, will be the principal reason for bringing about a rise in the value of silver, the government argues that such a rise properly belongs to it rather than to the speculators who happen to be holding the silver. It is in a sense an unearned increment of value which ordinarily would accrue to the speculators and which the government, by exercising its power of "eminent domain" has acquired for itself.

The question which disturbs the savings depositor and the conservative relates to the future conduct of the government. Will it increase the mint value of silver in order to raise [illegible] crement which it has [illegible] or will it follow a con[illegible] course and simply iss[illegible] rency against the purcha[illegible] of the silver? Its answe[illegible] this question, to be given in the months to come, will definitely indicate the future course of the government regarding inflation.

BACKS RAILWAY RATE PLEA

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(AP.)—James A. Moffett, federal housing administrator, said that on the basis of statements by railroads in their petitions for a hike in rates he believes they are entitled to it.

The major aim of the recovery program is restoration of the 1926 price level, Moffett said, adding that freight rates are below that and wages about up to it.

Informed that some lumber dealers had stated the proposed increase in freight rates—about $1 per 1,000 board feet—would almost take up the reduction made to aid the housing drive, Moffett said:

"Freight rates must reflect wage rate scales.

Capt. Midnight

By LOUIS ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM

CHAPTER VII

"Ah, yes. And I would have you stay with me for good. But you are so strange. I do not know your face. May I not—see it?"

Capt. Midnight was silent, the strong clasp of his fingers on her hand relaxed. She thought for a moment he would remove the masque and disclose to her curious eyes his countenance that she wished so much to look upon.

"I cannot," he said unhappily. "I—I dare not."

"But why? Surely you do not mistrust me! I have been perhaps too unmindedly, but I wanted to give you my lips—I did want to kiss you. Why? I know not. Unless it is that I have pictured your face in my dreams and found it fair and kindly. Is it? Would I love your face?"

Capt. Midnight laughed and there was something in his laughter that touched her heart, like a sharp, icy finger that stabbed at her heart and chilled its warmth.

"I do not think you would love it," he said slowly. "Ah, no—I fear you would turn from me. Have they not told you—something about him you so recklessly married?"

"Yes, but I could not hate you. But life is lonely for me here, I thought—I hoped that your—your coming might mean release from the ennui, the dreary procession of days. I suppose I should be thankful that, at least, it has freed me from the unwelcome advances of a man I despise. But, if you are not here to protect me—to some of them, you see, the fact that I am wed means little—"

Tells of Stolen Kiss

"You have been annoyed, then—by some one other than this man Girard. Tell me, Yvonne!"

Capt. Midnight's voice had the chill of steel and his hand came to rest, in a lightning motion, on the hilt of his sword.

"I should not speak of it," she regretted now that she had spoken. "But this man — his name is Jean Pierre Martel—"

"Martel! A rogue! A swashbuckler par excellence! But who am I to talk? However, tell me of him. He has given you some insult, my sweet?"

It was good to hear the jealous concern, the anger in his voice—good to feel that he would protect her, that he was jealous of her. And it would not hurt Jean Pierre Martel to know that there was one even stronger than he who would look out for her well-being and let no harm come to her.

"Last night, very late," she said hesitantly, striving to put into her voice a bit more of anger and outrage than she felt, "I heard some one at the garden gate. I had been sitting up waiting for Paul, my brother. I came into the garden and as I reached the gate right there—" She indicated the spot. Capt. Midnight's eyes, slits in the black masque, were fixed on her—— "a man vaulted over the wall. I thought it was my brother. Before I learned otherwise he had taken me in his arms and — and kissed me——"

"Diable!"

Capt. Midnight's teeth shut with a clicking sound and the word was hissed through them.

Pleads for Life

"I—I slapped him for it, told him he was a cad——"

"Of the lowest order," muttered Capt. Midnight. "It is enough, Yvonne. You have told me enough. This man has presumed to take that which is mine, and he shall pay. I swear to you he shall pay for this that he has done. Before another sun has set I will cross swords with him—I will kill him!"

"No! Oh, no—you must not—"

"So!" said Capt. Midnight, rising, flicking his gauntlet against his hand. "You do not want him to suffer? Strange—I thought you hated him for his temerity. It seems, milady, that your concern is as much for this idle scamp, this tavern-brawler and tremendous lover, as it is for the man you have married. Do you, then, love this Martel? Is your liking for him hidden under this feigned despising?"

"No! No! You misjudge me. I do hate him—but I would not see him killed, just because he took a kiss from me—"

"Men have been punished with death for deeds far less presumptuous. I thought you were different from others of your sex—stay! I am too harsh. I am sorry. But if he annoys you again, promise me you will let me know. The next time, I will not be stayed by your generosity, your mercy towards him. If he dares to touch you again, dares to kiss those lips that are mine alone—I will put an end to him. I promise you that my lips will know no others than yours—ever—and now—farewell."

He bent over her hand for an instant; then drew her again to him, kissed her lightly.

Secret Summons

"One thing," he said, as an afterthought. "If ever you have urgent need of me, do this that I tell you: By the windmill on the road to Sillery, there is an oak, white and gnarled, that was riven by lightning. It is hollow. Often, in the night I pass that way and every time I pass I shall look within. If I find a rose, of the softness and color of your cheek, there among the dead leaves, I will come to you, my love."

Breathless, eyes clouded with glamour, with the magnetic wonder of him, Yvonne stood and watched him scale the wall. For an instant silhouetted against the stars he turned his head, wafted with his fingers a kiss to her; then dropped from sight into the quiet lane outside.

The following afternoon, quite late, Yvonne went riding. She was weary of her voluntary seclusion and Capt. Midnight's visit had made life brighter, had strengthened her in her strange alliance and she was quite prepared now to stand whatever teasing or derision might come her way. She had a husband and obviously he loved her which was almost as much one expected of a husband.

She came to the Inn of the Fox. In the bright Little parlor of the inn was a party of four—and one of the four was Jean Pierre Martel. It was he Yvonne saw first, and she knew he had watched her arrival from the window by which he was sitting; with him were Melusine d'Artois, whom she knew only slightly; a Col. Monard and his wife, whom she knew even less well. Of Melusine, to be sure, she had heard—as who in Quebec had not?—and it was quite in keeping with her idea of Jean Pierre Martel that he should be with this flamy haired doll-faced Parisienne of so many loves.

Meets Melusine

The gentlemen rose from their chairs at her entrance. There was gladness in Jean Pierre's dark gray eyes. The woman looked at her with curious smiles, and Mme. Monard asked her if she would not join them.

"I thank you, but I am on my way to Sillery," said Yvonne, looking only at the colonel's lady, conscious all the while of Jean Pierre's intent and eager eyes—as if he begged her to give him the largess of just one glance. "I am stopping only for a moment."

A shadow moved across the polished surface of the pinewood table. Yvonne, startled, looked up. It was Melusine d'Artois. Yvonne had never spoken with her before. She was older than Yvonne. She was lovely, in a too flawless, too artificial way. Her skin was dead white and powdered, and at the corner of her ripe-red mouth was a tiny black beauty patch; her vividly blue, expressionless eyes were long-lashed, slightly almond-shaped. They had no warmth, and the smile on her parted lips had something feline about it.

"I do not like to intrude," she said, taking the stool opposite Yvonne, watching Yvonne with those blue eyes that were like windows with blue blinds drawn hard down behind them. "But I did so wish to speak with you. Just plain curiosity, you know, about the woman, who, in a manner, has done what I always wished to do."

Yvonne's amazement was greater than the resentment that Melusine's insolent drawling tone aroused in her.

Learns Identity

"What do you mean? What have I done—?"

"You have become his bride—is it not so? Ciel! Is it really true, what they say, that you were married to him without knowing his true identity? But you would not have seen."

"It is true. But how much of what you call the true identity of her husband does any woman know? It was enough that he seemed strong and honest—and kind. You do not appear to be kind, Mlle. d'Artois. Or did you cross over to me here just to hurt me?"

"Hurt you?" Melusine laughed. "I could not hurt you more than you will be hurt. I will tell you who this man is you so romantically and blindly wed—'faith, his way by far the better of the bargain, sweet Black Eyes—his name is St. Hilaire—Laurent Lemoine St. Hilaire—"

Junior Patrol Mail Box

This week's contest closes tomorrow fellows!

That means that a letter should be in the mail box today to be in this week's contest, write it now.

You know the subject this week—"Who Is the Greatest Man Living Today and Why."

Seems to us that every boy and girl has the greatest man living today already picked out. Maybe he's the man next door. Maybe he's a friend of yours in another town. No matter who he is, just write and tell us who he is and why you think he's the greatest man alive. We want to know what you think.

This letter by Jack McDonnell, of 2922 Meyran avenue, Pittsburgh, won third prize in last week's contest:

"On my side of the story I would rather have my vacation in the summer. Because in the summer you don't have to worry about school, and you can go swimming in South Park and other pools. I would rather pick wild flowers instead of building snowhouses and freeze my hands off. You can also go to Kennywood Park in the summer time. You can go camping and sleep in tents in the summer time. So after all, I think I would rather have my vacation in the summer time. Because you can have more fun."

You put up some good arguments, Jack, and many thanks for them. We were just a little bit sorry more fellows didn't think up reasons for having a vacation in the winter time, but after all we wouldn't want you to say anything you didn't believe, fellows.

There aren't many rules for Junior Patrol contests, but here are what they are, fellows. Letters should be not more than 100 words. Send your letter to the Junior Patrol Contest, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. To compete, you must be a Junior Patrol member.

Puppet of Fate

Daily Short Short-Story

By D. J. LEONARD

Young Mrs. Sally Brown, waiting for the homecoming of her lord and master, harbored some misgiving as to how she would receive him. Bill had been a brute this morning, refusing point-blank to spend another week-end at Uncle Martin's farm.

He didn't intend to miss the season's most important golf tournament, he had stated coldly, just because Uncle Martin had written urging their presence at one of his bucolic hoedowns.

Tears had been of no avail, and Bill had stamped off without even kissing her. The mere thought of such callousness brought fresh tears and she had to rush in for powder. That was why she didn't see Bill smuggle Susie into the house.

Bill's footsteps sounded in the hall and the last fingers around her heart melted as she saw him standing there grinning sheepishly.

"Hello, Sally," he said haltingly.

"Bill!"

She streaked across the floor and Bill managed to take her in one arm and deliver an extra embrace while still hiding something behind his back with his free hand. Suddenly that something wriggled violently and with a "wurp! wurp!" fell to the floor.

"Oooooh! Bill—wherever did you get the little darling?"

"Bill! I'm—I'm—well, almost glad we had that silly quarrel—"

With a variety program of awkward puppy antics, Susie filled the evening with merriment and then was bedded down for the night in a box with old rags in it.

Bill was just about to get into bed when a mournful wail stayed him. Sally raised her head from the pillow, questioning eyes on Bill. Another mournful was pierced the stillness.

They slipped on dressing gowns and took milk to Susie. The pup shaked at the lights and lapped up the milk with fussy vigor. But with the last drop the wailing commenced anew.

"Maybe she wants more," said Sally.

But this time the pup ignored the replenished saucer, raised up her head and wailed. Just wailed.

"What'll we do?" sighed Bill, wondering whether he shouldn't have bought runs instead of failing for the charms of an ungainly pup in a dog fancier's window.

The wailing, interspersed with short angry barks, beat upon their ears with Niagara-like persistency until their sense of hearing became numbed. But as it was, they could hear old Mr. Catchbarn's window thrown up with violence and an angry voice rendering the "confound that blasted dog" theme with variations.

"Could you take her back and let her stay with the mother dog?" asked Sally.

"What? At 1 o'clock in the morning?"

"But Bill—the neighbors—"

"Blast the neighbors! They were dogs themselves once—I mean children—oh, I don't know what I mean. If the silly thing would only stop howling and let me get some sleep. Fine shape I'll be in tomorrow for that tournament."

"Bill, let's take her for a walk. Maybe the fresh air—" Sally smiled demurely.

Sally and Bill walked through the dark city streets until nearly 3 of a chilly summer morning in an effort to tire out an inconsolable puppy. But as far as Susie was concerned the effort was wasted, although it worked with an vengeance on Bill but Sally seemed not to mind the trudging miles. Susie finally quieted, but Sally declared they shouldn't walk until Susie went to sleep.

Then it was Bill's turn for inspiration. "We're crazy to walk like this, Sally. The motion of our car would put her to sleep in a jiffy."

So, with fortitude worthy of a better cause, they tacked out the family bus and started on a cross-city tour of the principal points of interest.

Sally held Susie. She kept Bill driving until 5 o'clock, then she whispered, "She's asleep, Bill." In they tiptoed and laid the now blissfully Susie in the box. Sally looked at Bill. Dark circles under blue eyes were vivid memories of the travails and travels of the night.

"Bill—you poor boy! And you with an important golf match tomorrow—I mean this afternoon!" Her voice caused him to glance at her suspiciously.

"Sally," he said with some inkling that superior brains had schemed to frustrate him, "I guess the fates decided I just wouldn't play golf this week-end."

"Yes, Bill," she agreed coyly, "but . . ."

"But, darling," he interrupted, "you must never trade on your husband's gullibility again . . . I might have known you would keep me driving all night."

"Why, Bill!"

Their eyes met. They smiled and embraced.

FRISBY GOES RIGHT TO TOWN IN BARBER'S CHAIR!

By HORACE W. FRISBY

"How clear you make everything," a little manicurist friend of mine said the other day as she finished my nails and gave a final pat to my firm, strong hands. Her remark set me thinking as I reclined there in the barber's chair, relaxed and feeling fit to grapple with the nation's problems. I had made everything clear to the little manicurist and, indeed, everything was clear to me.

Invigorated by a leisurely exchange of ideas with those of my admirers who had followed me in and were now awaiting the attentions of the tonsorial craftsman in charge, I felt in the mood to legislate. And suddenly it occurred to me why I felt in the mood to legislate. The barber shop atmosphere; calm, relaxed, level-headed, keen, philosophical but nevertheless alert! How often I sighed to myself, had I not heard the problems that beset our nation so neatly solved in these havens of horse-sense. How unlike the halls of Congress, full of hurry, hustle, ill-will and partisan politics! Could we surmount the present crisis I asked myself, if our legislators felt as I felt at that moment; realy in the mood to legislate, seeing things clear and seeing them whole? Yes, indeed, I answered.

Well, folks, for a small installation charge, plus $1 a month for some time to come, I'll be willing to furnish the government these jim-dandy chairs with sliding foot-rest and adjustable back. Install one of them for each and every representative of the people, and you'll see a different bunch of laws passed in this country! And if any of the gentlemen want a shave as well Frisby knows the telephone numbers of a few lady barbers who are not bad. Not bad a-tall!

Another Blank Spot Filled In

Old Raymond Hitchcock used to ask, "Have you ever been in Bali?"

When you answered that you had never been to Bali, Hitch Raymond would say, "Then I'll tell you all about it."

If you had ever been there he would change the subject.

So, in the same futile spirit of science and research we will tell you all about the land behind the headhunters in New Guinea.

They've discovered a big tribe of people there who have been eliminated from estimates for twenty centuries by a fair count.

They don't wear any clothes. And that's another reminder of Hitchy when he was king of Bali. They told Hitchy there was a beautiful lady outside, naked and starving.

Hitchy said, "Feed the lady and bring her in."

So we ain't taking too much stock in this New Guinea discovery. It may turn out to be a new movie or a breakfast food or both.

The lost tribe was discovered by an anthropologist who had little to do. An anthropologist is a man who will sneak up in back of you and set off a bomb hoping you will climb a tree.

If the sudden shock causes your reflexes to scamper up the bark of the village oak, that proves your grandpops could pick up coconuts with his bare feet. It means there is ape in your family and that you had an ancestor who could run faster on his hands than he could on his feet.

That's the kind of people who are now being discovered by our explorers. It seems that our scientists could travel a trifle further and die better.

This new tribe has no motor cars, no radio and no movies. It possesses nothing that is expensive. If that constitutes ignorance and savagery we will take a double order and a big spoon.

The hill and dale hillies of New Guinea are in the primitive state of existence. They live on berries, roots and fish. That may not be a balanced diet. But no wolf will ever break into the dining alcove to get his share of it.

What is true of America will be true of New Guinea. It was a peaceful country before it was discovered.

Excessive Government—The Bane of America

ON this page, reprinted from the financial columns of the New York American, is an extraordinary map of the United States. It is a local tax map.

No matter where you live you may look at this map and see exactly what EXCESSIVE LOCAL GOVERNMENT, in your State if not in your own community, is doing to YOUR property and to YOUR income.

It is CONFISCATING both—gradually but inexorably.

For since 1913, as the map plainly shows, LOCAL TAXATION has been DOUBLED or MORE THAN DOUBLED in every State of the Union.

Actually, the figures appearing on the map are an understatement, because data of this kind are extremely slow to obtain, and the map in consequence runs only to the year 1930, when local taxes in nearly all communities were really LOWER than now, in 1934.

But taking the year 1930 for authentic comparison with the year 1913 what do we find?

THE following table sets forth the unexaggerated facts for the whole nation:

	Local Tax Increase
In 12 States	100% to 200%
In 30 States	200% to 300%
In 2 States	300% to 400%
In 2 States	400% to 500%
In 2 States	500% to 600%

48 States

The smallest increase, recorded for Montana, was 108.9 per cent. The largest increase was in Delaware, at 564 per cent. Within these two extremes ALL OTHER STATES OF THE UNION ARE GROUPED.

Now, what can this enormous increase in local taxation mean?

One thing only—that LOCAL GOVERNMENT, in the seventeen years accounted for, has deprived the people of BILLIONS of dollars at a steadily accelerating rate.

And what has become of all the money?

Has local government been taxing the people unmercifully in order to keep itself out of debt?

Other statistics prove the fallacy of any such conjecture.

Instead of REDUCING or AVOIDING public debt while spending more and more tax money, the States themselves and their thousands of political subdivisions year after year have been going DEEPER AND DEEPER INTO DEBT—municipalities alone borrowing at a "normal" pace of ONE THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS A YEAR ($1,000,000,000).

Consequently, on December 31, 1932, according to computations by the Municipal Finance Officers' Association, the forty-eight States and their innumerable local tax units had a combined bonded indebtedness approximating EIGHTEEN THOUSAND FIVE HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS ($18,500,000,000).

And this, mind you, is BONDED indebtedness only.

The same units of government also had—and have—an undetermined volume of fluctuating or "short-term" debts—and since 1932 there have been Federal loans and advances which also must some day be reckoned with.

These items, however, even when combined, represent ONLY A PORTION of the incredible cost of government.

To ascertain the entire cost you must add STATE TAXES as distinguished from LOCAL taxes, plus FEDERAL taxation and FEDERAL borrowing for strictly FEDERAL purposes.

The cumulative effect of so much public spending is, of course, simply staggering to contemplate.

Just lately the National Industrial Conference Board reported that GOVERNMENT is now consuming FORTY PER CENT of our national income, and there are plenty of reasons for supposing that the ruinous ratio is NOT decreasing but is STILL INCREASING.

Obviously, there must be a limit to the mounting cost of government—and that limit is merely THE CAPACITY OF THE GOVERNED TO PAY.

When that limit is reached or approached a breakdown is inevitable at the weakest point—which is, IN THE UNITS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

And that breakdown, despite factitious assurances from a few cities, has already manifested itself as a phase of the depression.

Everywhere in the country tax delinquencies have been occurring and multiplying.

And on March 1 of this year, according to figures collected by the Bond Buyer and issued by the American Legislators' Association, MORE THAN TWO THOUSAND units of local government had defaulted payments of interest or principal on their bonded debts.

These defaults included 343 counties, 690 cities or towns, 420 school districts and 593 other tax districts.

"But even these data," commented the Legislators' Association, "are ONLY ESTIMATES. No one can tell HOW MANY subdivisions of the States have failed to meet all the payments on their bonded debt when they became due."

IS IT any wonder that the National Economic League decides, after a nation-wide questionnaire, that "efficiency and economy in government, Federal, State and local, is THE MOST IMPORTANT QUESTION before the country at this time"?

But important is a mild word. The EVILS of excessive government and excessive taxation have become CRITICAL.

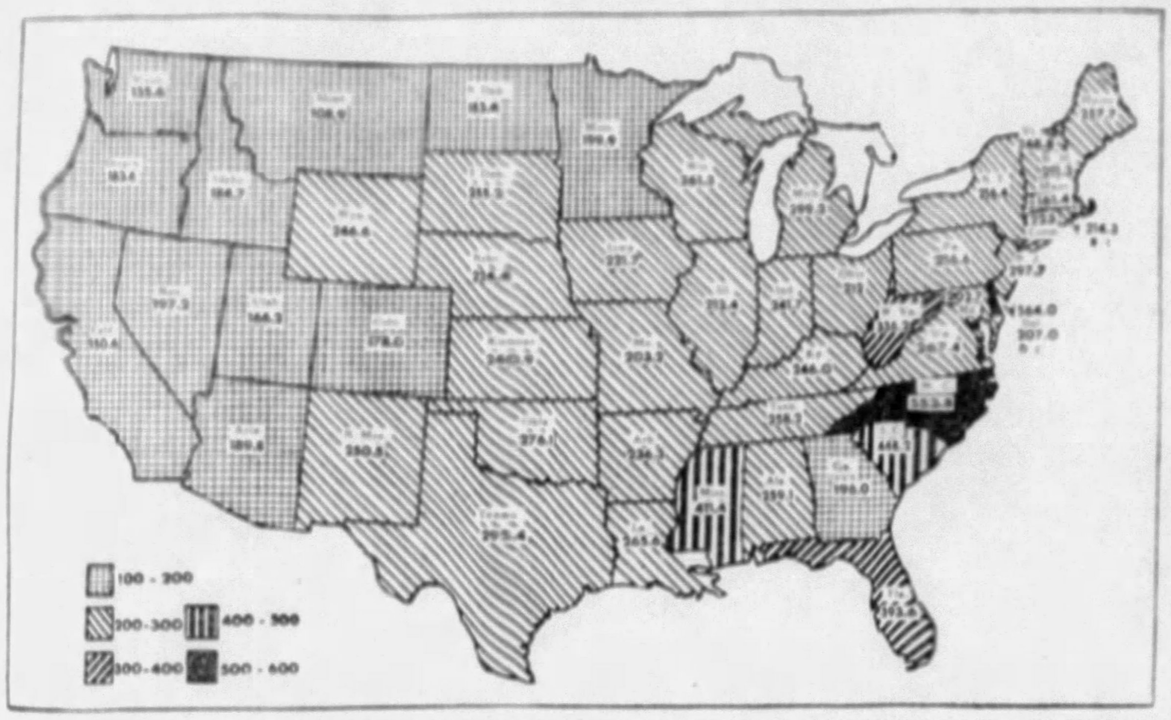
IN EVERY STATE LOCAL GOVERNMENT MUST BE OVERHAULED AND RADICALLY SIMPLIFIED.

Counties must be abolished or consolidated, municipalities must be combined and unified, petty tax districts must be eliminated, hordes of politicians must be expunged from public payrolls and SQUANDERING FOR PATRONAGE MUST STOP.

And reform—COMPLETE REFORM—cannot tarry over long.

For if it does we shall not have reform.

We shall have DISASTER and WHOLESALE REPUDIATION OF PUBLIC DEBTS.



The Rise in Local Taxation

State by State, this map shows in actual percentages how local taxation in 1930 had increased over 1913 in every State of the Union—for example, as the figures record, 108.9 per cent increase in Montana, the lowest increase for any State, and 564 per cent increase in Delaware, the highest.

This means, in the case of Delaware, that a per capita local tax of $100 in 1913 had increased to $664 in 1930.

As shown in the key below the map, the shadings indicate the groups into which the different States fall, an 100 to 200 per cent increase, 200 to 300 per cent increase, and so on.

The map thus illustrates graphically the crushing increase in our costs of local government.

He May Learn Something

Mayor McNair's Trip to Paris May Prove Beneficial to Pittsburgh

A great deal of criticism is being heaped upon Mayor McNair because he is going away to attend a meeting of municipal executives in France while affairs at City Hall are in the most chaotic state in the city's corporate history.

The Sun-Telegraph does not join in this clamor.

When men leave their home towns to attend conventions in other cities they do so usually for one of two purposes.

The other cannot be imputed to Mr. McNair, for, despite his suspiciously bizarre actions, he does not drink hard liquor.

He is opposed to it from deep conviction. He even went so far one time as to forget about single tax long enough to join the movement to induce Pennsylvania's Legislature to ratify the Prohibition Amendment.

So he must be going to France to learn things.

This is a hopeful sign.

He has much to learn.

We feared he did not realize it.

Out of the Question

Cities and Counties Cannot Assume Fresh Tax Burdens to Care for the Unemployed

Eric H. Biddle, state emergency relief director, suggests that cities and counties, instead of the Commonwealth, raise the money required by the Federal Government as a condition of continuing to grant funds to Pennsylvania for the relief of the unemployed.

The proposal should not be entertained. The money cannot be raised by the cities and counties, through a bond issue or any other way, except by imposing fresh taxes on real estate, which cannot stand a heavier burden.

If it be said that the heavily populated industrial cities and counties have nearly all the unemployed requiring relief, and that the agricultural and sparsely inhabited counties ought not to be asked to contribute to their support, the answer is that it is the cities and populous counties that provide by far the greater part of the state's revenues, both in corporation and gasoline taxes.

Dr. Steedle Repudiated

The Republican County Chairman Has Taken the Right Course

William H. Coleman, Republican county chairman, has reversed himself in respect to the candidacy of Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, one of the Republican nominees for the Legislature in the Twelfth District, who has been convicted in Federal Court of election frauds.

After having said he would not advocate the cutting of the Republican ticket to eliminate Steedle, Mr. Coleman now says he "cannot in good conscience ask the public to give him support."

Whatever the motive responsible for this change of front, whether considerations of political expediency or a sincere regard for public decency, Mr. Coleman must be given credit for having finally taken the right course.

LISTEN, WORLD!

The Women Clubbers

'Jever see anyone walk deliberately into the Jaws of Death? No? Then here's your chance. Meaning what? Meaning that I'm about to take a wallop at Women's Clubs. Compared to which, biting a bulldog or sassing a cop is just a game of checkers.

Before proceeding, however, get me right. I'm for Women. I'm also for Clubs. I'm even for women combining themselves into clubs. I have belonged to three clubs myself and expect to belong to more. And I am convinced that the right kind of Womens' Clubs have done more to civilize and socialize females—as well as clean up some dirty civic corners—than any other modern institution.

But when club work becomes a camouflage for vicious snooping, bullying, blackmailing, political brow-beating and hell-raisin' generally, it's time someone took a hand. And I'm hereby nominating myself to do it.

No one can deny that the Women's Club movement started with admirable intentions and excellent programs. But ever since the ladies got a nice, bloody taste of what they could do to a Man's World—if they once put their hearts in the job—they have been going carnivorous with appalling rapidity.

Women Clubbers? I'll say they are! Brass knuckles, blackjacks and loaded gas pipes have nothing on them when they once decide on action! Protected by the sacred tradition that you-can't-swat-a-woman, armed with equal suffrage and schooled for eons in every dirty device of back-fence mud-slinging, they stage offensives that make Tammy Hall's worst massacres look like spitball contests. Not for them the frank stick 'em-up banditry of convention politics! No fat-headed male could even imagine, much less have the nerve to employ, their amazing tactics.

Their most effective knife-sticking is done under the guise of Righteousness. Protecting Womanhood is their favorite scalping cry—and this would be a worthy cause if their desire to protect were sincere, and if the woman to be protected merited that service. In some cases it is—and she does. And in those cases all honor to the Club Women who tackle the job.

But in an increasing number of cases their crusade is prompted purely by a desire to spread their power and grab the spotlight—and they make not the slightest effort to investigate the worthiness of their protege. It matters not that she may be, and frequently is, a fool, cheat, tramp or conscienceless parasite. Here is the Women's Clubbers' chance to do their stuff, and they hop to it—and God help the unfortunate official who puts up a holler! Backed by their ballot and backfence blackmailing power, they can easily put any judge or editor on the skids—and proceed to do so.

As a consequence America has at present the world's record crop of female grafters, maternal moochers and alimony separate-maintenance and breach-of-promise racketeers.

And I'm telling you, girls, this sort of thing isn't going to buy us anything but grief. We have, in our clubs, a powerful tool for honorable purposes. We can, by the wise use of that tool, add immeasurably to the dignity and security of woman's place in this world. But our present methods are anything but wise.

Males—particularly vote-seeking males—being what they are, it's easy enough to scare 'em for a little while. But even now isolated individuals are holding out against this sort of terrorism. And some not-far-distant day the boys are going to unite and give us what people going for skulduggery and dirty politics always get—a well deserved sock-in-the-jaw.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Myself Not Less

When I look up into the sky at night
And see, down trackless avenues of space,
The tranquil stars that shine, forever bright,
I can forget the bonds of time and place.
Before me flows the whirling universe
In ordered rhythm, planet, star and sun,
No faltering note, no blight of any curse;
Perfection there its perfect work has done.
So infinitely great, I cannot grasp
The thought of age on age and star on star,
And yet I know the whole is in God's clasp,
All equal in His sight, the near and far.
Each atom counts in that infinity,
Myself not less than any world I see.

Andorra Dismisses Its Comic Opera Monarch and Turns Down an American's Offer for the Throne

By Edwin C. Hill

TINY ANDORRA, which lies high up among the peaks and plateaus of the Pyrenees, on the borderline of France and Spain, has dismissed its amusing monarch, Boris I, Prince of Andorra, "Count of Orange and Baron of Skossyreff."

Coming to Andorra with a rich American woman, his wit and shrewdness so impressed the simple Andorrans that they actually permitted him to set up himself as prince of the domain, with a string of titles a yard long. He was all for declaring war against the Spanish Bishop, and even made faces at the august French Republic, but his activities were too strenuous for the Andorrans and eventually, recently, they expelled him, told him to go away and return no more.

An American Bid For the Throne

THEY could have had an American for king, those Andorrans, and $100,000 to boot, if they had cared to accept an offer made by one Leopold Parillo, of Chicago. Parillo actually offered $100,000 for the honor, but the Syndics turned him down with a gesture of boredom and nothing more was heard from Mr. Parillo. Still and all, Americans do turn up as kings in far places. I once knew one who was king of a Fiji Island through one of the most romantic twists of fate you ever heard of.

I was in a sailor's bar one night, years ago, on the old Barbary Coast in San Francisco. Swaggering into the place came a whacking big man, broad-shouldered, with a flaming red beard fanning across his chest. He had the bluest eyes I think I ever saw. He shouldered up to the bar and downed a bottle of champagne at a draught, ordered drinks for the house, and tossed a double eagle on the counter. All quite with the royal manner, for a king he was sure enough, back in San Francisco, aboard his trading schooner after an absence of 10 years. And presently, over something tall and cool, he told me his amazing story.

His name was Edward Thompson, and he came originally from Albion, Ill. Out in Albion, as a slim, bashful young swain, he had courted a belle of the town, but she found another fellow she liked better and gave him the mitten. So he swore off all women, taking it bitter hard, and headed for the South Seas to make his fortune.

He drifted through the enchanted seas and came finally to the Island of Naikeva in the Fiji group. Right there little Dan Cupid got the drop on this woman-hater and shot him through and through. The Princess Lakanita, daughter of the native king and a Spanish half-breed wife, fell head over heels in love with the tall, red-haired, blue-eyed American. But he was still off women, still sore from the jilting he got back in Illinois.

So he drifted on, but before he went he made a pledge to the love-sick princess. He gave her his solemn word that if her life was ever in danger he would return to stand by her side, no matter where he happened to be. Then he faded out into the purple horizon, while Lakanita, with tear-dimmed eyes, watched his sails vanish over the rim of her world. Months later as Ed Thompson, of Albion, Ill., lounged in pajamas on the deck of a trading schooner, a canoe ranged alongside. A native paddleman stood up and called for the white man with the blue eyes.

Asked to Aid Against Rebels

YOUNG Thompson looked over the rail and recognized one of the 6-foot retainers of the king and the princess. A rebellion had broken out in Naikeva. Lakanita and her father, with a handful of loyal spearmen, were holding off the rebels, but pretty nearly at the end of their string. So she had sent a messenger to implore her blue-eyed white man to remember his pledge.

That night Ed Thompson headed the little schooner toward Naikeva. He made his landfall in the nick of time. He went into the fight with a running jump and a rifle, and when he got through there wasn't any more rebellion, and most of the rebels had ceased to take any interest in Naikeva politics. But the old king had been killed and Ed Thompson had been speared through the side.

He lay for months, suffering from his wound and with tropical fever, and Lakanita nursed him tenderly. And under the incredible stars and the blazing Southern Cross he forgot all about his hatred for women and fell madly in love with the dusky princess. And when she asked him to marry her and be King of Naikeva, Ed Thompson grinned, kissed the lady with a resounding smack and said "O. K. Lakanita." And so they were married, and according to the annals of the South Seas, where many strange things happen, lived happily ever afterward.

Will Rogers Says:

Will Rogers

MOSCOW, Aug. 29.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Talk about a town on a boom! This is it. I never saw as many buildings going up in my life. You have heard of equality of sex in Russia. Thats not so, the women are doing the work. They are digging a subway. Have talked all day today with Morris Hindus, Walter Duranty and Louis Fisher. Here are three men that know their Russia from A to Bolsheviki. I am so full of facts and statistics that I feel like a brain truster.

By the way, I got my little Chinese professor with me yet. They can fool me but they can't fool him. Yours, WILL.

SHIP PROGRAM VAGUE

By James T. Williams, Jr.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S assurances regarding the future of the American merchant marine would be more encouraging if they were less vague.

Mr. Roosevelt is quoted as saying that the United States intends to have and maintain an "adequate" merchant marine. Unfortunately, he does not say what he means by "adequate," or what methods he thinks should be employed to give the country the kind of merchant marine which he says the country wants.

In the merchant marine act of 1920, Congress declared it to be the policy of the United States "to carry the greater portion of the commerce of the United States in its own merchant marine, which might also serve as a military or naval auxiliary in time of war."

It was declared, further, to be our policy to do whatever was necessary to encourage and maintain such a marine and the Shipping Board was directed to keep always in view this purpose and object as the primary end to be obtained.

Congress reaffirmed this policy and primary purpose in the Jones-White act of 1928, which provided for the further development of an American merchant marine and for the assurance of its permanence in the transportation of the foreign trade of the United States and for other purposes.

In view of the fact that only one-third of the foreign trade of the United States is today carried in American ships, while one-third is carried in British ships and one-third in other foreign flag ships, it is obvious that there must be considerable expansion of the American merchant marine if established American policy is to be pursued to the end that "the greater part of our foreign trade may be carried in American ships.

Wallace's Views Seem in Conflict

BY AN "adequate merchant marine, Congress has repeatedly declared that it meant one large enough to carry "the greater part" of our foreign trade in our own ships. If by "adequate" President Roosevelt means the same thing, then the expansion of the American merchant marine under his administration as the law provides would seem to be assured.

This, however, is not what his Secretary of Agriculture meant when, in a recent letter to the chairman of the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, Mr. Wallace wrote to Congressman Bland, of Virginia:

"Any further governmental encouragement of the shipping industry by subsidy or similar measures would tend to divert the energies of our people in some degree in shipping as compared with other industries.

"Allowing foreigners to carry a large percentage of our trade promotes our commodity exports, for it means that foreigners have more purchasing power with which to buy them.

"If we further protect shipping, we shall export less of our farm commodities."

Yet Mr. Roosevelt is quoted as saying that Secretary Wallace really "subscribes to the President's views on shipping" and that the letter of his Secretary of Agriculture has been misunderstood.

Unfortunately, the administration persists in its refusal to make public the complete text of this extraordinary letter of Mr. Wallace or any part of the text of the letter of Congressman Bland, which brought forth the reply of Mr. Wallace, or to say wherein this correspondence has been misunderstood.

Issue Fogged By Dickinson

MEANTIME the real purposes of the administration in regard to the future of the American merchant marine are further clouded by a public statement from the Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Dickinson, who, while favoring federal aid for American shipping, says:

"We are already buying approximately two-thirds of our shipping service from foreigners. This leaves the foreigner an ample margin of payment from shipping services to purchase large quantities of American exported goods."

Is the public to infer from this assertion that President Roosevelt's Assistant Secretary of Commerce is willing to limit the American merchant marine to its present strength and thereby permit foreign shipping to continue to carry two-thirds of the overseas trade of this country? Is that what Mr. Dickinson has in mind and would that constitute, in the opinion of Mr. Roosevelt, an "adequate" merchant marine.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

In nearly every group there are good-looking, well-dressed young fellows who try to avoid paying their share of entertainment expenses.

They are adepts in avoiding the subject when pay-time arrives.

They will tell a good story with great zest when matters of a financial nature come up.

If cornered they are not at all abashed to admit that they are unable to pay an assessment.

You'll often hear their threadbare statements to some other fellow in the crowd: "You pay for me and I'll pay you in a day or two."

They never make an effort to pay their relative share until pressure is brought on them.

In fact, some create the impression that their society should be ample payment for any debt they might be expected to pay.

Such fellows are usually snobby towards those who may not associate in as high a grade of society as that with which they mingle.
